102. gesture

= make one or more communicative movements

做手勢

103. gesticulate

= move arms/hands energetically, often repeatedly while speaking

比手畫腳

Gesticulate often suggests more energetic or extensive movement.

CQ. GESTURE vs TOKEN

104. token gesture

= symbolic act with little practical effect

象徵式 / 敷衍性的姿態

But:

token

alone can mean a small symbol/object representing something.

Do not automatically equate all gestures with tokenism.

CR. GESTURE vs PERFORMANCE — SOCIAL MEANING

105. gesture can be sincere or performative

A gesture can be:

* sincere

* strategic

* symbolic

* empty

* performative

112. a gesture / gestures

Usually countable:

- > a gesture
- > 一個手勢 / 舉動

- > several gestures
- > 幾個手勢

113. gesture — broader artistic/communicative concept

Sometimes used more abstractly:

- > the use of gesture in theatre
- > 戲劇中肢體動作的運用

Here it behaves more like an activity/concept.

CV. SEMANTIC MAP

The core concept of GESTURE is:

a visible movement that communicates something

From this develop four major modern branches.

A. Physical communication

> hand gesture

> → 手勢

> gesture toward the door

> → 朝門口示意

> gesture for someone to stop

> → 做手勢叫某人停下

This is the passage branch.

B. Symbolic social action

The communicative movement becomes a broader communicative act:

> gesture of goodwill

> → 善意表示

> gesture of apology

> → 表示歉意的舉動

> grand gesture

> → 隆重 / 戲劇性的表示

> empty gesture

> → 空洞姿態

The action “communicates” an attitude even if it is not literally a hand movement.

C. Figurative indication

> gesture toward a solution

> → 略為指向 / 提出一個解決方向

The physical idea of “pointing toward” becomes intellectual.

D. Technical / artistic movement

> gesture drawing

> → 動勢素描

> musical gesture

> → 音樂動勢

> gesture recognition

> → 手勢辨識

> swipe gesture

> → 滑動手勢

The shared idea remains:

meaning or function carried by movement.

CX. PASSAGE RECAP

> “...students who seldom spoke in class could identify the conflict, describe the characters’ motives and explain how tone, gesture and hesitation changed the meaning of a sentence.”

Here:

gesture

= a movement of the hands, head, face, or body that communicates emotion, attitude, intention, or meaning

Best Traditional Chinese:

* 手勢

* 肢體動作

* 表意動作

Natural contextual translation:

到了我們寫反思文章時，即使平日很少在課堂上發言的學生，也能指出其中的衝突、描述角色的動機，並解釋語氣、手勢和猶豫如何改變一句話的意思。

Passage MCQ-ready meaning

gesture

= a bodily movement used to communicate something without relying only on words

手勢；肢體動作

The biggest learner branches are:

> hand gesture

> → 手勢

> gesture toward the door

> → 朝門口示意

> gesture for someone to sit down

> → 做手勢示意某人坐下

but figuratively:

> gesture of goodwill

> → 善意表示

> gesture of apology

> → 表示歉意的舉動

> grand romantic gesture

> → 隆重 / 戲劇性的浪漫舉動

> empty gesture

> → 空洞姿態

> token gesture

> → 敷衍性的象徵姿態

and in advanced academic language:

> gesture toward a solution

> → 略為指向 / 提出一個解決方向

Modern technology adds:

> gesture recognition

> → 手勢辨識

> swipe gesture

> → 滑動手勢

> pinch gesture

> → 捏合縮放手勢

Art and performance add:

> gesture drawing

> → 動勢素描

> theatrical gesture

> → 戲劇性肢體動作

> musical gesture

> → 音樂動勢 / 音型

The most important conceptual distinction is:

> movement

> → merely physical movement

but:

> gesture

> → movement that communicates, symbolizes, indicates, or expresses something

That is exactly why gesture matters in the passage. In drama, words alone do not determine meaning: a character can say the same sentence while pointing, shrugging, stepping back, raising a hand, or turning away, and each gesture changes how the audience interprets the character's intention and emotion.
