Passage recap

> “It is one thing to read about peer pressure, empathy or moral courage...”

Here:

peer = someone of approximately the same age, status, or social group

Best Traditional Chinese:

* 同儕 *

* 同輩 *

* in school contexts: 朋輩 / 同齡人 *

Natural contextual translation:

閱讀有關同儕壓力、同理心或道德勇氣是一回事；真正進入一個必須用言語、沉默和行動去考驗這些觀念的情境，又是另一回事。

Passage MCQ-ready meaning

peer

= a person who is similar to another person in age, status, ability, profession, or social group

同儕；同輩

The biggest learner splits are:

> peer pressure

> → 同儕壓力

> peer review

> → 同行評審

> peer-to-peer network

> → 點對點網絡

but as a verb:

> peer through the window

> → 透過窗戶仔細看

and as a noun in a completely different formal sense:

> a British peer

> → 英國貴族

A very useful contrast is:

> peer

> → 跟你處於相近層級的人

not necessarily:

> friend

> → 與你有私人友誼的人

So in the passage, peer pressure means social pressure from people in a student's own age/status group, not pressure from parents, teachers, or other authority figures.
