Meaning in this passage

> A team meeting that should generate solutions may instead turn into a contest of egos, with people defending pride rather than pursuing results.

Here, pride means:

a person's sense of self-importance, self-respect, or personal status that they do not want to see damaged — 自尊；面子；自我尊嚴

In this sentence, people may:

- * refuse to admit they are wrong,
- * defend their own idea simply because it is theirs,
- * resist backing down,
- * feel that compromise means “losing,”
- * care more about protecting their image than solving the problem.

So pride here is not the healthy:

> “I am proud of doing good work.”

It is closer to:

自尊 / 面子受到威脅後，想維護自己地位與形象的心理

中文翻譯：

原本應該產生解決方案的團隊會議，反而可能變成一場自我意識的較量，人們忙於*維護自己的自尊 / 面子*，而不是追求實際成果。

場地外展示了一面Pride 旗幟。

Practice 2

> Different Pride flags may represent different communities.

不同的 Pride 旗幟可以代表不同社群。

Important distinction 1: pride = healthy self-respect vs excessive arrogance

This is the single most important distinction.

Positive:

> pride in good work

> 對優質工作的自豪

Neutral/self-respect:

> hurt pride

> 自尊受傷

Negative:

> excessive pride

> 自負 / 傲慢

The same noun can move across all three.

Important distinction 2: pride vs proud

pride

noun:

> She felt pride.

> 她感到自豪。

proud

adjective:

> She was proud.

> 她感到自豪。

Important distinction 3: proud of vs pride in

They are close:

> I'm proud of my work.

> 我為自己的工作感到自豪。

> I take pride in my work.

> 我以把工作做好為傲。

But take pride in often carries a stronger sense of:

重視品質並用心做好

rather than merely feeling pleased afterward.

Important distinction 4: proud vs prideful

proud

can be healthy and positive.

prideful

usually implies excessive pride/self-importance.

Therefore:

> proud parent

> 自豪的家長 > prideful parent

> sounds much more like 自負 / 驕傲過頭的家長.

Important distinction 5: pride vs self-respect

self-respect

belief that you deserve dignity and proper treatment.

pride

broader:

* achievement satisfaction,

* self-respect,

* defensive ego,

* arrogance.

Healthy self-respect is normally positive.

Pride can become excessive.

Important distinction 6: pride vs dignity

dignity

sense of worth and respectable self-control.

pride

more emotionally connected to:

- * achievements,
- * status,
- * self-image.

- > maintain your dignity
- > 保持尊嚴

- > protect your pride
- > 保護自尊 / 面子

Important distinction 7: pride vs ego

Extremely relevant to your passage.

ego

sense of self; often in everyday negative usage, excessive self-importance.

pride

sense of one's worth, status, achievement or self-respect.

In:

- > contest of egos + defending pride

the two reinforce one another:

- > ego = "I must be important/right."
- > pride = "I cannot afford to look wrong or lose face."

Important distinction 8: pride vs vanity

vanity excessive concern with:

- * appearance,
- * admiration,
- * how impressive you seem.

pride

broader concern with:

- * achievement,
- * status,
- * dignity,
- * being right.

Someone can have pride without vanity.

Important distinction 9: pride vs arrogance

pride

can be positive.

arrogance

is negative and involves an exaggerated sense of superiority.

- > proud of your achievement
- > arrogant about your ability  negative

So:

pride ≠ arrogance

but excessive pride can become arrogance.

Important distinction 10: pride vs confidence confidence belief in your ability.

pride

positive feeling about your value or achievements.

> confidence before the task

> pride after achievement

This is only a rough pattern—they can coexist at any time.

Important distinction 11: proud vs confident

proud

“I am pleased with what I/we achieved.”

confident

“I believe I/we can do this.”

Different emotional directions.

Important distinction 12: pride vs honour

honour

respect, moral reputation, or distinction bestowed/maintained.

pride

the internal feeling of satisfaction/self-worth.

> It was an honour to represent the team.

> 代表團隊是一種榮幸。

> I felt proud to represent the team.

> 我為能代表團隊感到自豪。

Important distinction 13: pride vs satisfaction satisfaction

contentment because something turned out well.

pride

adds a stronger connection to:

- * achievement,
- * identity,
- * self-worth.

You can be satisfied with a meal without feeling pride.

Important distinction 14: take pride in vs boast about take pride in feel appropriate satisfaction.

boast about

talk excessively about achievements, often to impress others.

> She takes pride in her work.

> positive

> She boasts about her work constantly.

> often negative

Important distinction 15: pride vs boastfulness

Pride is an internal feeling.

Boastfulness is outward behaviour.

A person can be very proud without boasting.

Important distinction 16: professional pride vs ego

professional pride

can improve standards:

> “I want this work to be accurate.”

ego

can damage teamwork:

> “My idea must win because it is mine.”

This contrast is especially important in your passage.

Important distinction 17: hurt pride vs hurt feelings hurt feelings

general emotional upset.

hurt pride

specifically upset because your:

- * status,
- * competence,
- * dignity,
- * self-image

has been challenged.

Important distinction 18: wounded pride vs humiliation

wounded pride

self-esteem has been hurt.

humiliation

stronger experience of being made to feel ashamed or degraded.

Humiliation may wound pride, but they are not identical.

Important distinction 19: swallow your pride vs lose your dignity

Completely different.

swallow your pride

temporarily stop protecting your ego so you can:

- * apologise,
- * ask for help,
- * accept reality.

lose your dignity

become degraded or lose self-respect.

Swallowing pride can actually preserve dignity.

Important distinction 20: too proud to vs too embarrassed to too proud to ask for help

"I don't want to lower myself / admit weakness."

too embarrassed to ask for help

"I feel shy/ashamed."

Different emotional causes.

Important distinction 21: pride oneself on vs boast pride yourself on X

identify X as a particularly valued strength.

boast about X

talk proudly about it to others.

> We pride ourselves on reliability.

> professional business English does not automatically sound boastful.

Important distinction 22: pride oneself on vs take pride in

Very close.

take pride in your work

feel satisfaction and care about its quality.

pride yourself on being punctual regard punctuality as one of your defining strengths.

The reflexive pride oneself on often has a stronger:

“this is one of our defining qualities”

sense.

Important distinction 23: source of pride vs pride and joy

source of pride

makes you proud.

pride and joy

you both:

* love it deeply,

* and are extremely proud of it.

Pride and joy is warmer and more personal.

Important distinction 24: pride of place

This does not mean:

> pride about a geographical place.

It means:

the most important/prominent display position

> The trophy has pride of place.

Important distinction 25: the pride of the city

This is different again.

> the pride of the city

= something the city is especially proud of.

Compare:

> The statue is the pride of the city.

> 這座雕像是全市的驕傲。

> The statue has pride of place in the square.

> 這座雕像放在廣場最顯眼的位置。

Completely different constructions.

Important distinction 26: a pride of lions

This has no emotional meaning in ordinary modern analysis.

It is a fixed collective noun:

獅群

Compare:

> pride in achievement

> 自豪

> a pride of lions

> 一群獅子

Important distinction 27: Pride capitalisation

lowercase pride

general noun:

> pride in your work

capitalized Pride

often refers specifically to LGBTQ+ community celebrations, identity visibility, and related events:

> Pride Month

> Pride parade

Capitalization therefore matters.

Important distinction 28: proudly = positive vs negative

Usually:

> proudly displayed

> 自豪地展示

But context can make it negative:

> proudly refused to admit error

> 傲慢地拒絕認錯

The adverb inherits whichever sense of proud is active.

Important distinction 29: false pride

This usually does not mean:

> “pretending to feel proud.”

Instead it often means:

an unnecessary or misguided concern with dignity/status that stops you doing something sensible

Example:

> False pride stopped him asking for help.

Important distinction 30: pride and prejudice

As ordinary words:

* pride = self-regard / self-importance

* prejudice = unfair preconceived judgment.

They are conceptually different even though they are famously paired in a literary title.

Important distinction 31: pride can motivate good work

Not all pride is a teamwork problem.

Healthy pride can encourage:

* careful work,

* professional standards,

* responsibility,

* improvement,

* ownership.

The problem in your passage is specifically:

defensive pride not pride itself.

Important distinction 32: defensive pride

This is not necessarily a fixed dictionary compound, but it accurately describes the passage's psychology:

自尊受到威脅後，為了不顯得錯誤、弱勢或失敗而採取防禦行為

For example:

- > refusing to accept feedback
- > refusing to compromise
- > attacking another person's idea
- > changing the subject rather than admitting an error.

Important distinction 33: pride vs face

Very useful for Traditional Chinese learners.

pride

internal self-respect/self-image.

face

social reputation/status as perceived by others.

English pride can often translate naturally as 面子 in contexts such as:

- > too proud to apologise
- > 太顧面子，不肯道歉
- > hurt pride
- > 自尊受傷 / 覺得丟面

But pride and face are not perfect lexical equivalents.

Important distinction 34: pride vs stubbornness

pride

reason/motive:

- > “I don't want to admit I was wrong.”

stubbornness

behavioural tendency:

> “I refuse to change my position.”

Pride can cause stubbornness, but they are not the same thing.

Important distinction 35: pride vs defensiveness

pride

the self-image/status being protected.

defensiveness

the reaction when a person feels criticized or threatened.

Sequence:

> criticism → wounded pride → defensiveness

This fits your passage very naturally.

Important distinction 36: pride vs reputation

pride

internal feeling/self-regard.

reputation

what other people generally think of you.

Someone may defend pride because they believe their reputation is threatened, but these concepts differ.

Important distinction 37: pride in your work vs ownership

pride in your work

emotional satisfaction + concern for quality.

ownership

sense of responsibility/accountability for the work.

Good teamwork benefits from both.

Important distinction 38: pride in your work vs perfectionism

pride

want to produce something good.

perfectionism

demand extremely high or flawless standards, sometimes excessively.

They should not be confused.

Important distinction 39: pride in your passage

The wording is:

> people defending pride rather than pursuing results

This creates a very precise contrast.

defending pride

focuses inward:

> "I must not look wrong."

> "My idea must win."

> "I cannot back down."

pursuing results

focuses outward:

> "What actually solves the problem?"

> "What is best for the team?"

> "What outcome are we trying to achieve?"

So pride here means:

personal self-image and status that people protect even when doing so harms the team's objective

Family-extension note

The pride family has several major modern branches:

1. positive satisfaction

- * feel pride
- * with pride
- * great pride

2. care for quality

- * take pride in your work
- * professional pride

3. group identity

- * national pride
- * civic pride
- * school pride

4. cause of pride

- * source of pride
- * point of pride

5. adjective satisfaction

- * proud of
- * proud to
- * proud that

6. make another person proud

- * make someone proud
- * do someone proud

7. visible pride

- * beam with pride

- * swell with pride
- * bursting with pride

8. self-respect

- * personal pride
- * hurt pride
- * wounded pride

9. defensive ego

- * defend pride
- * protect pride
- * put pride aside

10. lowering your ego

- * swallow your pride

11. excessive self-importance

- * excessive pride
- * foolish pride
- * false pride

12. proud as potentially negative

- * too proud to apologise
- * proud and arrogant

13. prideful

- * prideful attitude

14. verb

- * pride oneself on

15. fixed expressions

- * pride of place
- * pride and joy
- * pride comes before a fall

16. something making a group proud

* the pride of the city

17. zoology

* a pride of lions

18. capitalized proper-noun use

* Pride

* Pride parade

* Pride Month

For your passage, the exact branch is:

pride = a person's vulnerable sense of self-worth, status, or face that they may try to protect instead of focusing on the group's result

For your original sentence

> A team meeting that should generate solutions may instead turn into a contest of egos, with people defending pride rather than pursuing results.

Here:

pride = 個人對自己能力、地位、正確性和尊嚴的感覺；當它受到威脅時，人可能不願認錯、妥協或接受別人的想法

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 原本應該產生解決方案的團隊會議，反而可能變成一場自我意識的較量，人們忙於維護自己的自尊和面子，而不是追求實際成果。

The cleanest contrast is:

- > healthy pride = 我很重視把事情做好
- > self-respect = 我不願自己被不合理地貶低
- > wounded pride = 我的自尊受到傷害
- > ego = 我對自己的重要性 / 地位的意識
- > arrogance = 我認為自己比別人優越
- > defensive pride = 我不能承認自己錯，否則我會覺得丟臉

And for this paragraph, the most useful pair is:

- > take pride in good work → usually constructive
- > defend pride at the expense of results → destructive

So the passage is not criticizing pride in general. It is criticizing the moment when protecting one's ego becomes more important than solving the team's problem.
