Meaning in this passage

This problem is especially serious in large organisations, where departments such as marketing, finance and operations may use different professional language and priorities.

Here, professional means:

relating to a particular occupation, specialist field, or type of skilled work — 專業領域的; 職業上的

Different departments develop their own specialised vocabulary.

For example:

- finance → cash flow, margin, return, variance
- marketing → target market, positioning, conversion
- operations → capacity, workflow, throughput

So professional language here means:

specialised language used by people working in a particular profession or business function — 專業用語; 職業領域用語

中文翻譯：

這個問題在大型機構中特別嚴重，因為市場推廣、財務和營運等部門可能使用不同的專業用語，亦有不同的優先事項。

Here the meaning emphasizes:

amateur → paid professional activity.

Important distinction 1: professional = relating to a profession vs professional = behaving well

Compare:

professional language 專業領域用語

professional behaviour 專業得體的行為

The first is descriptive.

The second is evaluative.

Important distinction 2: professional vs expert

professional

may mean someone does something as an occupation or has recognised professional status.

expert

means someone has exceptionally strong knowledge/skill.

A person can be a professional without being an expert, and an amateur can be an expert.

Important distinction 3: professional vs specialist

professional

emphasizes occupational status, standards or conduct.

specialist

emphasizes concentration in a particular narrow field.

healthcare professional

醫療專業人士

heart specialist

心臟專科醫生／專家

Important distinction 4: professional vs qualified qualified

has required qualifications or competence.

professional

broader:

- works in the field,
- follows professional standards,
- may behave professionally.

A qualified person can still behave unprofessionally.

Important distinction 5: professional vs skilled skilled has ability acquired through training/experience.

professional

may additionally imply:

- occupation,
 - qualifications,
 - formal standards,
 - professional behaviour.

Important distinction 6: professional vs vocational

professional

related to a profession or high-level work standards.

vocational specifically related to practical preparation for a particular occupation.

professional development 在職專業發展

vocational training 職業技能培訓

Important distinction 7: professional vs occupational occupational generally related to work/employment.

professional

often narrower and may imply specialist training or professional status.

occupational health 職業健康

professional ethics 專業倫理

Important distinction 8: professional vs formal

Very important for your passage.

formal language

language appropriate to serious/official situations.

professional language

language characteristic of a profession or specialist work field.

For example:

“liquidity risk”

is professional financial terminology, even though a sentence containing it need not be particularly formal.

So:

professional language ≠ formal language.

Important distinction 9: professional language vs jargon

professional language

neutral term for specialised language.

jargon

specialist terminology, often with the implication that outsiders may find it difficult to understand.

professional terminology neutral

financial jargon
can sound mildly critical

Important distinction 10: professional vs technical technical related to specialised technical knowledge, methods or technology.

professional

related to the broader occupation/profession.

technical terminology 技術術語

professional language 專業用語

Technical language is one kind of professional language.

Important distinction 11: professional vs business

business language

commercial/workplace language.

professional language

can belong to any specialised profession:

- medicine,
- law,
- engineering,
- finance,
- education.

So professional is broader than business.

Important distinction 12: profession vs occupation

occupation

any regular type of work.

profession

traditionally implies:

- specialist education,
- expertise,
- standards,
- sometimes licensing or a professional body.

delivery driver = occupation
lawyer = profession

Modern English sometimes uses profession more broadly, but the distinction remains useful.

Important distinction 13: profession vs career

profession

type of occupation/field.

career

the longer path of jobs, roles and development over a person's working life.

medicine is her profession 醫學是她的專業

she has had a successful medical career 她有成功的醫療職業生涯

Important distinction 14: profession vs job job

specific paid position.

profession

broader specialist field.

My job is at City Hospital.
我的工作職位在某醫院。

My profession is medicine.
我的專業是醫學。

Important distinction 15: professional vs amateur

This is one of the major polysemy branches.

professional

paid to perform an activity.

amateur

does it mainly for interest rather than as a paid occupation.

This distinction is especially important in sport and performance.

Important distinction 16: professional does not automatically mean “highly skilled”

A professional athlete means:

paid athlete.

It does not logically guarantee that they are among the world's best.

Conversely:

professional-quality work

does evaluate quality.

So context determines whether professional refers to:

- occupational status, or
- high standard.

Important distinction 17: professional photographer: two overlapping ideas

professional photographer

can mean:

1. someone earns money from photography, or
2. someone has professional-level expertise.

Usually both are implied, but the occupational meaning is primary.

Important distinction 18: professional services

This usually does not mean simply:

“services done well.”

It is an established commercial category involving specialist knowledge, e.g.:

- law,
 - accounting,
 - consulting,
 - engineering,
 - architecture.

Important distinction 19: professional advice vs friendly advice

professional advice

given in a professional capacity using specialist expertise.

friendly/personal advice

informal recommendation from someone who may not have specialist responsibility.

Important distinction 20: professional judgment vs personal opinion

professional judgment

based on specialist:

- training,
- evidence,
- standards,
- experience.

personal opinion

individual belief or preference.

They can overlap, but they are not equivalent.

Important distinction 21: professional ethics vs personal morals

professional ethics

rules/principles tied to a profession.

personal morals

individual beliefs about right and wrong.

A professional may face tension between them.

Important distinction 22: professional standards vs company rules

professional standards

may come from:

- professional bodies,
- regulators,
- industry standards.

company rules

belong specifically to one employer.

A worker may need to follow both.

Important distinction 23: professional conduct vs professionalism

professional conduct

specific behaviours and standards.

professionalism

broader quality/attitude shown through those behaviours.

professional conduct = what you do professionalism = the overall professional quality you display

Important distinction 24: professionalism vs expertise

expertise

technical knowledge/skill.

professionalism

how responsibly and appropriately you behave.

Someone may have excellent expertise but poor professionalism.

Important distinction 25: professional image vs professionalism

professional image

how someone appears to others.

professionalism

actual conduct and standards.

Looking professional does not guarantee genuine professionalism.

Important distinction 26: professionally = skillfully vs as a career

Compare:

The report was professionally designed.

由專業人士／以專業水準設計。

They know each other professionally.
他們因工作關係而認識。

Different meanings.

Important distinction 27: professional development vs training

training

specific learning activity.

professional development

broader ongoing growth including:

- training,
- mentoring,
- conferences,
- experience,
- reflection,
- certification.

Training is one component of professional development.

Important distinction 28: professional qualification vs degree degree

academic qualification from a university.

professional qualification

qualification specifically linked to a profession.

Someone may hold:

- a degree,
 - a professional qualification,
 - or both.

Important distinction 29: professional body vs regulator

professional body

represents or develops a profession; may set standards.

regulator

has formal authority to regulate activity or practitioners.

Sometimes one organisation performs both roles, but not always.

Important distinction 30: professional accreditation vs certification accreditation

often recognition of a:

- programme,
- institution,
- organisation.

certification

often confirms that an individual or product has met specified standards.

Actual terminology varies by profession.

Important distinction 31: professional licence vs qualification qualification

shows training/competence.

licence

gives formal legal or regulatory permission to practise.

A person may have qualifications but still require a licence.

Important distinction 32: professional misconduct vs unprofessional behaviour

unprofessional behaviour

broad and may be relatively minor:

rude email, inappropriate joke.

professional misconduct

much stronger:

serious breach of professional duties or rules.

Do not use them as equal-strength synonyms.

Important distinction 33: professional negligence vs mistake mistake

an error.

professional negligence

a legally or professionally significant failure to meet reasonable standards of care.

Not every professional mistake is negligence.

Important distinction 34: semi-professional vs part-time professional

semi-professional

often describes an activity somewhere between amateur and full professional status.

part-time professional someone genuinely working professionally, but for fewer hours.

Different concepts.

Important distinction 35: paraprofessional vs professional

A paraprofessional supports the work of qualified professionals but normally has a different scope, qualification level or role.

It does not mean:

“bad professional” or “almost professional.”

Important distinction 36: professionalisation: quality vs paid status

Professionalisation can mean two related processes:

A. raising formal standards:

- qualifications,
- training,
- ethics,
- organisations.

B. turning an amateur activity into paid professional work:

- professionalisation of sport.

Context determines the emphasis.

Important distinction 37: profession of faith

This has nothing to do with occupation.

Here profession means:

an open declaration

It is a distinct formal/religious branch.

Important distinction 38: professional in your passage

The passage says:

marketing, finance and operations may use different professional language

So professional here does not mean:

- polite,
- competent,
- highly skilled,
- paid rather than amateur.

It means:

associated with a specialised field of work

Therefore:

professional language

≈ specialised workplace terminology used within a particular field

Family-extension note

The professional family divides into several major modern branches:

1. related to a profession

- professional language
- professional knowledge
- professional experience

2. training and qualifications

- professional training
- professional qualification
- professional development

3. standards and ethics

- professional standards
- professional conduct
- professional judgment

4. professional services

- professional advice
- professional fees
- professional indemnity

5. professional organisations

- professional body
- professional association

6. career/work life

- professional career
- professional background

7. workplace behaviour

- professional manner
- keep it professional

8. appearance/image

- professional image
- professional appearance

9. quality standard

- professional-quality
- professional-grade

10. paid vs amateur

- professional athlete
- professional musician
- turn professional

11. professional as person

- healthcare professional

- working professional

12. highly competent person

- true professional
- consummate professional

13. profession

- medical profession
- enter the profession
- the professions

14. declaration sense of profession

- profession of faith

15. professionalism

- demonstrate professionalism

16. negative opposite

- unprofessional
- professional misconduct

17. partial/support professional status

- semi-professional
- paraprofessional

18. development of professional structures

- professionalise
- professionalisation

For your passage, the exact branch is:

professional = relating to the specialised knowledge, vocabulary and working practices of a particular occupation or business field

For your original sentence

This problem is especially serious in large organisations, where departments such as marketing, finance and operations may use different professional language and priorities.

Here:

professional language = 每個專業職能因自己的知識、工作程序和目標而形成的一套專門詞彙和表達方式

For example:

marketing → target market, positioning, conversion
 finance → cash flow, margin, return, variance
 operations → capacity, workflow, throughput

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

這個問題在大型機構中特別嚴重，因為市場推廣、財務和營運等不同部門可能使用不同的專業用語，亦有不同的優先事項。

The most important learner distinction is:

formal language = 正式場合使用的語言

technical language = 技術性／專門技術語言

jargon = 行內術語, 常帶「外行難懂」意味

professional language = 特定職業或專業領域中的專門用語

So in this passage, professional describes the field the language belongs to, not how polite or competent the language sounds.
