

Absolutely — remove is a strong polysemy/family target because your passage uses it here:

> “society must reduce their cost, remove the inconvenience of charging and rebuild public trust in the technology.”

Here remove means to eliminate or get rid of a problem, obstacle, or unwanted condition.

Word family: remove / removal / removable

Base verb: remove

Noun: removal

Adjective: removable

Part of speech: verb (動詞) / noun (名詞) / adjective (形容詞)

Major domains:

- * physically take something away
- * eliminate a problem/obstacle
- * take off clothing/object
- * dismiss from a job/position
- * relocate someone/something
- * delete data/files
- * remove from office
- * surgery/medicine
- * stains/impurities
- * legal/administrative removal
- * distance/degree through at one remove / removed from
- * detachable objects through removable

Meaning in your passage: remove = eliminate / get rid of — 消除；去除；排除

Your sentence:

> “remove the inconvenience of charging”

Formal/literary.

Practice 95

> “He knew the industry only at one remove.”

「他對這個行業的了解只是隔了一層、間接的。」

Practice 96

> “The story is told at one remove from the events.”

「這個故事與事件本身之間隔了一層，屬於間接敘述。」

Low-frequency but genuine.

AW. REMOVE VS TAKE AWAY

49. remove vs take away

remove

= formal/broad; physically or abstractly eliminate.

take away

= everyday, usually physically carry away or subtract.

> remove a stain

> = 去污 > take away the boxes

> = 把箱子拿走

Not always interchangeable.

AX. REMOVE VS DELETE

50. remove vs delete

remove

= take something out of a place/system/list.

delete

= erase data/content.

Example:

> remove a file from a folder

> may mean:

* move it elsewhere

* delete it

> delete a file > specifically:

* erase it.

Important computing distinction.

AY. REMOVE VS ERASE

remove

= get rid of something broadly.

erase

= wipe out marks/data/writing.

> remove stain

> erase pencil mark

Different typical objects.

AZ. REMOVE VS ELIMINATE

51. remove vs eliminate

remove

= get rid of / take away.

eliminate

= make completely cease to exist, often stronger/more formal.

> remove a barrier

> = 排除障礙 > eliminate all risk

> = 消除所有風險

Eliminate often emphasizes total disappearance.

BA. REMOVE VS REDUCE

This is directly relevant to your source sentence:

> “reduce their cost, remove the inconvenience...”

reduce = make less.

remove

= make disappear / get rid of.

So:

> reduce cost

> = 降低成本 > remove inconvenience

> = 消除不便

This contrast is deliberately precise.

BB. REMOVE VS REPLACE

52. remove vs replace

remove

= take away.

replace

= put another thing in its place.

Example:

> remove old battery

> → take it out

> replace old battery

> → take it out and put a new one in

Very important.

BC. REMOVE VS DETACH

detach

= separate something attached.

remove

= broader; take away from position.

A removable cover may first be detached, then removed.

BD. REMOVE VS DISMANTLE

remove

= take component away.

dismantle

= take a whole system/object apart into pieces.

> remove battery module

> dismantle battery pack

Different scale.

BE. REMOVE VS EXTRACT

53. remove vs extract

extract

= pull/take something out, often from inside another thing and sometimes with difficulty.

remove

= broad neutral verb.

> remove a tooth

> = broad/formal > extract a tooth

> = technical dental term

BF. REMOVE VS EXCISE

excise

= surgically cut out tissue.

remove

= broader medical verb.

> remove tumour

> excise lesion

Excise is more technical.

BG. REMOVE VS DISMISS

54. remove vs dismiss

remove from position

= take someone out of office/role.

dismiss

= formally terminate employment or reject something.

A director may be:

> removed from the board without necessarily being:

> dismissed from all employment.

BH. REMOVE VS SUSPEND

remove

= take someone out completely.

suspend

= temporarily stop duties/status.

> removed from post

> = no longer in it > suspended from post

> = temporarily barred.

BI. REMOVE VS EXPEL

55. remove vs expel

remove = broad take away.

expel

= formally force someone to leave an institution/group/country.

- > remove disruptive person from room
- > expel student from school

The latter is stronger/formal disciplinary action.

BJ. REMOVE VS EVICT

remove = broad.

evict

= legally force someone out of property.

- > remove someone from building
- > does not necessarily imply legal eviction.

BK. REMOVE VS DEPORT

56. remove vs deport

In immigration law:

- * removal can be a broad legal process/category.
- * deport means formally expel a non-citizen from a country.

Exact terminology varies by jurisdiction.

Do not assume every “removal” legally equals “deportation”.

BL. REMOVE VS CLEAN

clean

= make something clean.

remove

= take away specific dirt/contaminant.

> clean the surface

> remove grease from the surface

Remove identifies what disappears.

BM. REMOVE VS FILTER OUT

remove = broad eliminate.

filter out

= remove by passing material through a filter/system.

> filter out particles

> = specific method

> remove particles

> = result regardless of method.

BN. REMOVE VS RELIEVE

remove

= eliminate problem/source.

relieve

= reduce discomfort/severity.

> remove the cause

> relieve the symptoms

Very useful distinction.

BO. REMOVE VS SOLVE

remove a barrier

= get rid of obstacle.

solve a problem

= find a successful resolution.

Removing one obstacle may help solve a larger problem, but the actions differ.

BP. REMOVE VS LIFT

remove a restriction

= cancel/get rid of restriction.

lift a restriction

= idiomatic formal phrase meaning cancel restriction.

For:

* ban

* embargo

* restriction lift is often more natural.

BQ. REMOVE VS WITHDRAW

remove

= take something away.

withdraw

= deliberately take back something previously offered/available.

> remove a product from shelf > withdraw a product from market

The latter emphasizes retraction.

BR. REMOVE FROM MARKET

57. remove a product from the market = 下架 / 撤出市場

> “The test cannot completely remove the possibility of failure.”

「測試不能完全排除失敗的可能性。」

Practice 104

> “A backup system removes some possibility of interruption.”

「備用系統可以減少 / 排除部分中斷可能性。」

Natural Chinese may prefer:

> 排除可能性

BV. REMOVE RESPONSIBILITY / LIABILITY

61. remove responsibility/liability = 免除責任

Practice 105

> “The disclaimer does not remove the company’s legal responsibility.”

「免責聲明不會免除公司的法律責任。」

Practice 106

> “Insurance does not remove all liability.”

「保險並不會免除所有責任。」

Here:

> remove = cause obligation to no longer apply.

BW. REMOVE A REQUIREMENT

Practice 114

> “The process for removing leaders varies by organization.”

「不同組織罷免領導人的程序並不相同。」

CA. REMOVE YOURSELF

66. remove yourself from a situation = 離開某情況；退出

Practice 115

> “She removed herself from the discussion.”

「她退出了討論。」

Practice 116

> “He chose to remove himself from the conflict.”

「他選擇退出這場衝突。」

This is formal compared with:

> leave / withdraw.

CB. REMOVE YOURSELF FROM DANGER

67. remove yourself from danger = 離開危險；脫離險境

Practice 117

> “Remove yourself from the area if it becomes unsafe.”

「如果該區變得不安全，應立即離開 / 脫離危險區域。」

「公司不能簡單地撇清責任。」

Contextual translation can be:

* 抽身

* 撇清

* 退出

CD. REMOVE IN MATHEMATICS? NOT A CORE SENSE

There are occasional technical instructions like:

> remove a term / remove a variable

but this is simply:

> delete/eliminate not a distinct mathematical lexical sense.

So:

> do not split artificially.

CE. REMOVE IN PHOTO/IMAGE EDITING

69. remove an object/background = 移除物件 / 背景

Practice 121

> “The software can remove unwanted objects from photos.”

「軟件可以從照片中移除不需要的物件。」

Practice 122

> “The background was removed automatically.”

「背景被自動移除。」

This belongs to digital deletion/editing, not a separate core meaning.

CF. REMOVE IN AUDIO

70. remove noise = 去除雜音

Practice 123

> “The software removes background noise.”

「軟件可以去除背景雜音。」

Practice 124

CM. REMOVE IN YOUR PASSAGE — SEMANTIC ROLE

Your sentence says:

> “reduce their cost, remove the inconvenience of charging and rebuild public trust...”

The writer deliberately uses three different verbs:

> reduce cost

> remove inconvenience

> rebuild trust

This is semantically precise:

* reduce = make less

* remove = eliminate * rebuild = restore/create again

So remove here is stronger than:

> reduce the inconvenience

The sentence argues that charging inconvenience should ideally be:

> eliminated as a practical barrier, not merely made slightly smaller.

CN. CORE SEMANTIC MAP

The central idea is:

> take something away from where it currently exists

From this physical meaning, English extends naturally:

physical > remove box clothing

> remove coat

unwanted substance

> remove stain

obstacle

> remove barrier risk/problem

> remove uncertainty person

> remove official from office digital > remove file medicine

> remove tumour

law > removal order

figurative distance > far removed from reality

The family is broad, but the conceptual core stays remarkably stable:

> take away / make no longer present.

CO. PRONUNCIATION

remove /rɪ'mu:v/removal /rɪ'mu:vəl/

removable /rɪ'mu:vəbəl/

Stress remains on:

> MOVE

CP. FAMILY-EXTENSION SWEEP
