Passage recap

> “At the hospital, while Kelvin and his mother sat outside the emergency room in shock...”

Here:

in shock = emotionally stunned and overwhelmed after a sudden frightening event

Best Traditional Chinese:

* 震驚不已

* 驚魂未定

* 仍處於巨大衝擊之中

Natural contextual translation:

*在醫院裡，Kelvin 和母親驚魂未定地坐在急症室外時，梁先生替他們買了水，還一直陪到清晨。

Passage MCQ-ready meaning

shock

= a powerful emotional reaction to something sudden, frightening, upsetting, or unexpected

震驚；衝擊

The single most important learner distinction is:

> in shock after terrible news

> → 震驚 / 驚魂未定

but:

> go into shock after severe blood loss

> → 陷入休克

These are not the same condition.

Other major branches are:

> electric shock

> → 觸電 / 電擊

> shock absorber

> → 避震器

> shock wave

> → 衝擊波

> culture shock

> → 文化衝擊

> price shock

> → 價格衝擊

> shocked person

> → 感到震驚的人

> shocking news

> → 令人震驚的消息

So the passage uses the emotional stunned/overwhelmed branch, not the medical 休克 sense.
