

Word family: venue / venues

Base word: venue

Plural: venues

Part of speech: noun (名詞)

Your sentence:

> “First, using restaurants as tutorial venues is fundamentally unfair to the businesses involved.”

Meaning in this passage

Here, venue means a place where a particular activity or event is held.

The restaurants are being used as places in which tutors conduct lessons.

繁體中文： 場地；舉行某種活動、課程、表演、會議等的地方

中文翻譯：

> “...using restaurants as tutorial venues...”

「.....把餐廳當作補習場地.....」

Here:

tutorial venue = 進行補習課程的場所 / 場地

1. venue = place where an event/activity happens (活動場地) — 場地；場所

This is the meaning used in your passage.

Meaning: A place where an organized event, activity, meeting, performance, lesson, competition, etc. is held.

Practice 1 — Original

> “Restaurants should not become long-stay tutorial venues.”

「餐廳不應變成長時間使用的補習場所。」

Practice 2

> “They are looking for a wedding venue.”

「他們正在尋找婚禮場地。」

Practice 3

> “The concert venue can hold several thousand people.”

「這個演唱會場地可以容納數千人。」 venue = 某項有組織的活動實際舉行的地方

Common:

- * concert venue
- * wedding venue
- * sports venue
- * meeting venue
- * conference venue
- * event venue
- * music venue
- * tutorial venue

This is the dominant everyday meaning.

2. venue = building/facility specifically used for events (設施) — 場館 ; 活動場所

Sometimes venue refers not merely to a geographical location but to the building or facility hosting the activity.

> “The stadium is one of the city’s largest sporting venues.”

「這座體育館是城市其中一個最大的體育*場館*。」

Practice 5

> “The venue has three function rooms and a large hall.”

「這個*活動場地 / 場館*有三個宴會廳和一個大禮堂。」 venue = 專門或實際用來舉辦活動的建築物 / 設施

For strict counting, this belongs under Meaning 1. A concert hall, café, stadium, hotel ballroom, or classroom may all be a venue depending on what happens there.

3. venue = non-physical forum/outlet for an activity or expression (抽象) — 平台 ; 渠道 ; 場合

Venue can be used figuratively for a forum, medium, or setting that provides an opportunity for something to happen.

It does not always have to be a literal physical building.

Practice 6

> “The journal provides a useful venue for academic debate.”

「這份期刊為學術辯論提供了一個有用的平台 / 渠道。」

Practice 7

> “Social media has become an important venue for public discussion.”

「社交媒體已成為公共討論的重要平台。」 venue = 讓某種交流、表達、討論或活動得以進行的平台 / 場合

This is a genuine figurative extension of the event-place meaning.

4. venue = online/virtual place where an event occurs (網絡) — 線上場地 ; 虛擬平台

Modern events can take place in a virtual venue.

Practice 8

> “The conference will use an online venue for remote participants.”

「這場會議會使用一個線上活動平台供遙距參加者使用。」

Practice 9

> “The virtual venue allows people to attend from different countries.”

「這個虛擬場地 / 平台讓不同國家的人都能參加。」

This is not a separate core meaning from #1/#3. The underlying concept remains:

> the setting in which an organized activity takes place

5. venue = proper geographical place for a legal case (法律) — 審判地；訴訟地點

This is the most important genuinely distinct technical meaning.

In law, venue refers to the proper geographical place, court district, or locality in which a legal case is heard.

Practice 10

> “The defendant requested a change of venue.”

「被告要求更改審判地點。」

Practice 11

> “The court considered whether the venue was proper.”

「法院考慮該訴訟地點 / 審判地是否適當。」 legal venue = 某宗法律案件應在哪個地理區域、法院地區或地點審理

The precise rules depend on the legal system, so this is a domain-specific sense.

6. change of venue = move a trial/case elsewhere (法律固定用語) — 更改審判地點

Practice 12

> “The lawyers applied for a change of venue.”

「律師申請更改審判地點。」

In legal contexts, this usually concerns transferring proceedings to another location.

In ordinary event English, change of venue can also simply mean:

> changing where an event will be held.

Practice 13

> “There has been a last-minute change of venue for the meeting.”

「會議臨時更改了場地。」

Same phrase, but legal and ordinary-event contexts differ.

7. venue = market/platform where financial trading occurs (金融) — 交易場所 ; 交易平台

In finance, a trading venue is a place or system through which financial instruments are traded.

Practice 14

> “The shares are traded across several trading venues.”

「這些股票透過多個交易場所 / 交易平台進行交易。」

Practice 15

> “The firm compared prices across different execution venues.”

「公司比較了不同交易執行平台的價格。」

trading venue = 提供金融產品買賣或交易執行的市場 / 系統 / 平台

This is an established specialist extension.

Conceptually it is still a “place/system where an activity occurs,” but the institutional meaning is important enough to surface.

8. venue = performance circuit/location in entertainment (表演業) — 演出場地

In music, comedy, theatre, nightlife, etc., venue is especially common for establishments that regularly host performances.

Practice 16

> “The band played at several small venues.”

「樂隊在幾個小型演出場地表演。」

Practice 17

> “The club is one of the city’s best live-music venues.”

「這間俱樂部是城市其中一個最好的現場音樂場地。」

This remains firmly under Meaning 1.

9. venue = sports ground/location (體育) — 比賽場地 ; 場館

Practice 18

> “The final will be held at a neutral venue.”

「決賽將在中立場地舉行。」

Practice 19

> “The organizers announced the Olympic venues.”

「主辦單位公布了奧運比賽場館。」

Again, this is a domain application of Meaning 1 rather than a separate semantic branch.

Important distinction: venue vs place

place

is extremely broad.

venue

specifically suggests:

> a place selected, arranged, or used for an organized activity/event.

Compare:

> “This is a nice place.”

= 這是一個不錯的地方。

> “This is a good wedding venue.”

= 這是一個適合舉辦婚禮的場地。

So venue normally carries an event/activity function.

Important distinction: venue vs location

location

means where something is geographically situated.

venue

means where an event or activity is held.

> restaurant location

> concert venue

A venue has a location, but the words are not identical.

Important distinction: venue vs site

site

often refers to a specific piece of land/place where something exists, happened, or is being constructed.

venue

emphasizes organized activity.

> construction site

> conference venue

There can be overlap:

> event site / event venue

but the emphasis differs.

Important distinction: venue vs facility

facility means a building/site equipped for a particular function or service.

venue

means a place used for a particular event/activity.

A sports facility can serve as a competition venue.

So:

> facility emphasizes what the place is equipped to do.

> venue emphasizes what event/activity is happening there.

Important distinction: venue vs premises

premises

means a building and surrounding property occupied by a business or organization.

venue

means the activity-hosting location.

> restaurant premises

> wedding venue

A restaurant's premises can temporarily become an event venue.

Important distinction: venue vs hall

is a type of physical room/building.

venue

is a functional category.

A hall can be a venue, but a venue might instead be:

- * a café
- * stadium
- * park
- * theatre
- * online platform

Important distinction: venue vs forum

emphasizes discussion, exchange of ideas, or public debate.

venue

is broader and can host virtually any activity.

In figurative usage:

> a venue for discussion

can be close to:

> a forum for discussion.

Important distinction: venue vs jurisdiction — legal

jurisdiction

concerns a court's legal authority/power to hear a case.

venue

concerns the proper geographic location where the proceeding should take place.

The precise distinction varies somewhat across legal systems, but they should not be treated as synonyms.

Important distinction: venue vs court

court

can mean the judicial institution or physical courtroom.

venue

in legal language concerns the appropriate place/district for proceedings.

So legal venue is not simply another word for “court.”

Countability note

Venue is countable:

- > a venue
- > two venues
- > several possible venues

Examples:

- * a suitable venue
- * a wedding venue
- * multiple trading venues

Useful construction: venue for something —的場地 / 平台

Practice 20

> “The café has become a venue for informal meetings.”

「這間咖啡店已成為非正式會議的場所。」

Practice 21

> “The website provides a venue for discussion.”

「這個網站提供了一個討論平台。」

This can be physical or abstract.

Useful construction: venue for + activity

Common:

- * venue for concerts
- * venue for conferences
- * venue for learning
- * venue for debate

Your passage uses:

> tutorial venues

which is the same basic construction compressed into a noun modifier.

Useful construction: at a venue — 在活動場地

> “Food is available at the venue.”

「活動場地有食物供應。」

A useful distinction:

> at the venue

usually means at the place where the event is being held, whereas:

> in the venue

focuses more literally on being inside the building/place.

Family-extension note

The morphological family is genuinely very small:

* venue
* venues

There is no common productive modern family such as venual or venually that learners need to acquire.

Most richness comes from domain applications and constructions rather than derivation:

* event venue
* sports venue
* wedding venue
* music venue
* virtual venue
* legal venue
* trading venue
* change of venue

This is exactly the sort of word where we should not manufacture a large word family just to make the entry look fuller.

For your original sentence

> “First, using restaurants as tutorial venues is fundamentally unfair...”

The exact meaning is:

venues = 實際進行補習課程的地方 / 場地

So:

> tutorial venues

= 補習場地 / 進行補習活動的場所

The writer deliberately chooses venue rather than simply place because these restaurants are being used as if they were organized locations for conducting a recurring activity.

For your database, I would count 3 genuinely useful core meanings for venue:

1. physical place/building where an organized event or activity is held
2. figurative/non-physical forum or platform where an activity takes place
3. legal: proper geographical place/district for hearing a case

I would keep trading venue as an established specialist extension of #1/#2, and merge sports, music, wedding, conference, tutorial, and virtual-event contexts according to the same underlying activity-setting concept rather than splitting them by industry.
