

Absolutely — another is a very useful grammar/polyfunctionality target because your passage uses it here:

> “Another thing she enjoys is sharing what she grows with other people.”

Here another means one more / a different additional thing. It can function as a determiner or pronoun and is especially important to contrast with other, the other, others, the others, and one another.

Word family: another / other / others

Base form: another

Part of speech: determiner (限定詞) / pronoun (代名詞)

Core idea: an + other = one more / a different one

Unlike a normal lexical word, another is mainly a grammar/selection word.

Meaning in your passage: another + singular countable noun = 另一個 ; 又一個

Your sentence:

> “Another thing she enjoys is sharing what she grows...”

Here another thing means:

> one more thing, in addition to the things already mentioned.

繁體中文 :

在前面已經提到的事情之外，再加上一件；另一個 / 又一個

Natural translation:

> “Another thing she enjoys is sharing what she grows with other people.”

「她另外也很享受的一件事，就是把自己種的東西分享給別人。」

So here:

> another thing = 另一件事 / 另外一件事

Important distinction: another vs other

This is the biggest learner contrast.

another + singular countable noun

> another plant

> = 另一棵 / 再一棵植物

other + plural noun

> other plants

> = 其他植物

other + uncountable noun

> other information

> = 其他資料

So:

> another plant

> other plants

> another plants

Except the special:

> another three plants

where three plants is treated as one additional quantity.

Important distinction: another vs the other

another

= one more / a different one among an open or unspecified set.

> “Give me another apple.”

= 再給我一個蘋果。

the other

= the remaining one of a known pair.

> “I have two apples. One is red; the other is green.”

= 兩個中的另一個。

So:

> another = 另一個 / 再一個

> the other = 兩者中剩下的那一個

Important distinction: another vs others

another

singular:

> another flower

others

plural pronoun:

> some flowers are red; others are yellow

So:

> another = 另一個

> others = 其他一些 / 其他人

Important distinction: other vs others

other

normally needs a noun:

> other plants

others

stands alone:

> some survived; others died

So:

> other = 其他的

> others = 其他人 / 其他事物

Important distinction: the other vs the others

the other

singular:

= 剩下那一個

the others

plural:

= 剩下那些全部

Example:

> Two plants: one...the other.

> Five plants: two are inside; the others are outside.

Important distinction: another one vs one another

This is extremely testable.

another one

= 另一個 / 再一個

> "I need another one."

one another

= 彼此

> "They help one another."

Word order completely changes the meaning.

Important distinction: another + number

Normally another takes singular:

> another plant

But:

> another three plants

is correct because three plants functions as an additional quantity.

Meaning:

> three more plants

So:

> another three plants = 再三棵植物

Important distinction: another vs more

These overlap.

another three days

= 再三天

three more days

= 再三天

Both natural.

But:

> another book

> = another one

> one more book

> = one additional book

Very close, with another often smoother.

Important distinction: another vs different

another

may mean:

* one more

* a different one

different explicitly emphasizes not the same.

> “Try another method.”

could mean a different method.

> “Try a different method.”

more explicitly contrasts it with the current method.

Important distinction: another vs else

another

comes before singular countable noun:

> another reason

else

comes after indefinite pronouns/interrogatives:

> someone else

> what else

> anything else

Not:

> else reason

Important distinction: one...another vs one...the other

More than two / unspecified:

> “One is red, another is blue, another is green.”

Exactly two:

> “One is red, the other is blue.”

This pair is especially important.

Important distinction: another day vs the other day

Completely different.

another day

= 另一天 / 改天

> “Let’s do it another day.”

the other day

= 前幾天 / 不久前某一天

> “I saw her the other day.”

Excellent MCQ contrast.

After the full audit, the useful modern inventory is:

* another + singular noun = 另一個 / 又一個
