AG. “ASIDE” VS “ON THE SIDE”

46. aside = 到一旁 / 暫時撇開

Practice

> “Put the phone aside.”

= 把手機放到一旁。

on the side

can mean:

* 在旁邊

* 作為額外副業

* 配菜另外上

So:

> aside ≠ on the side

Very important.

AH. IMPORTANT DISTINCTIONS

aside vs beside

A classic learner trap.

aside

= to one side / away from the main position.

> “Move aside.”

= 讓開。

beside

= next to.

> “Sit beside me.”

= 坐在我旁邊。

So:

> aside = 移向一邊

> beside = 在.....旁邊

aside vs besides

aside from

= 除了.....之外 / 撇開.....不談

besides

= 此外；而且；除.....之外

> “Aside from the cost, the plan is good.”

= 撇開成本不談，計劃很好。

> “Besides the cost, there are other problems.”

= 除了成本，還有其他問題。

They can overlap, but syntax and emphasis differ.

aside from vs apart from

These overlap strongly.

aside from

= except for / besides / leaving aside

apart from

= same range of meanings

> aside from one issue

> ≈ apart from one issue

Regional/style preferences vary.

aside from vs except for

except for

clearly excludes one exception.

aside from

can either:

* exclude

* add another point

Example:

> “Aside from John, everyone came.”

= 除 John 外，所有人都來了。

But:

> “Aside from being cheap, it is convenient.”

= 除了便宜之外，它也方便。

So aside from is more flexible.

aside from vs excluding

excluding

= formally leave out.

aside from

= can mean mentally setting aside, or “apart from”.

> excluding tax

> = 不包括稅項

> aside from tax

> could mean “撇開稅項不談”

Not identical.

put aside vs set aside

They overlap heavily.

put aside

often:

* physically put down

* stop considering

* save

set aside

especially common for:

- * reserve money/time
- * formally reserve
- * legally overturn

Examples:

> put the phone aside > = 把手機放一旁

> set aside money > = 預留金錢

> set aside a judgment > = 撤銷判決

set aside vs postpone

set aside

= stop dealing with it for now, or reserve something.

postpone

= move an event/action to a later time.

> set aside the issue > = 暫時不談問題

> postpone the meeting > = 把會議延期

Not interchangeable.

set aside vs reserve

reserve

= keep available for a particular person/purpose.

set aside

= put apart specifically for future use.

> reserve a table

> = 預訂桌位

> set aside money

> = 預留金錢

Strong overlap in resource contexts.

set aside vs save

save money

= not spend it.

set aside money

= deliberately allocate it for a particular future purpose.

> save $500

> = 儲 500 元

> set aside $500 for repairs

> = 預留 500 元維修

Useful distinction.

put differences aside vs resolve differences

put differences aside

= 暫時不讓分歧妨礙合作

resolve differences

= 真正解決分歧

So putting them aside does not mean they have disappeared.

brush aside vs set aside

set aside a concern

= 暫時不處理 / 不考慮

brush aside a concern

= 輕率地不理會、覺得不重要

Brush aside has a more dismissive tone.

step aside vs move aside

move aside

= physically move out of the way.

step aside

can mean:

1. physically move
2. resign/yield a role

> step aside as CEO

> = 辭去行政總裁職務 / 讓位

stand aside vs step aside

step aside

often:

= move away / leave a role

stand aside

often:

= not intervene

> stand aside and watch

> = 袖手旁觀

Though physical overlap exists.

take someone aside vs pull someone aside

Both:

= take someone away from others to speak privately.

take aside

neutral.

pull aside

slightly more physical/immediate.

aside — adverb vs noun

Adverb:

> “Put the phone aside.”

= 把手機放到一旁。

Noun:

> “He made an aside.”

= 他說了一句題外話 / 旁語。

Same form, different grammar.

aside — theatre vs conversational aside

Theatre:

> character speaks to audience, supposedly unheard by others.

Conversation/writing:

> brief digression away from main topic.

The shared concept is:

> something placed to the side of the main action/discussion

This is the central semantic bridge.

aside — physical vs figurative

Physical:

> phone → moved to one side

Figurative:

> problem → moved to the side of attention

This produces:

* put aside emotions

* set aside an issue

* lay aside doubts

The spatial metaphor is very productive.

aside from — exclusion vs addition

This is one of the most important ambiguity points.

Exclusion:

> “Aside from one mistake, the work was excellent.”

= 除了一個錯誤之外，其他都很好。

Addition:

> “Aside from being talented, she works very hard.”

= 她除了有天分之外，也很努力。

So the context decides whether it means:

* except for or
* besides

aside vs aside from

aside

adverb/noun:

> move aside / an aside

aside from

preposition:

> aside from the cost

Do not treat them as grammatically identical.

set aside — legal vs everyday

Everyday:

> “Set the problem aside.”

= 暫時擱置問題。

Legal:

> “The court set aside the decision.”

= 法院撤銷裁決。

The legal meaning is much stronger:

> not “pause it”, but invalidate/overturn it.

Excellent MCQ contrast.

set-aside — noun vs set aside — verb

Verb:

> “Set aside some money.”

= 預留一些錢。

Noun:

> “a procurement set-aside”

= 特別預留給某類供應商的合約份額。

Hyphenation changes grammatical role.

aside in your passage

> “I posted a 45-second video and put my phone aside...”

Here aside does not mean:

- * besides,
- * except for,
- * theatrical aside,
- * reserve money,
- * legally overturn something.

It means:

> the writer physically put the phone away to one side and stopped paying attention to it for the moment.

There is also a subtle pragmatic implication:

> the writer expected nothing important to happen, so the phone could simply be put away.

That makes the overnight viral result more surprising.
