

Word family: bring / brings / brought / bringing

Base word: bring

Past tense: brought

Past participle: brought

-ing form: bringing

Part of speech: verb (動詞)

Your sentence:

> “I still remember one time when I forgot to bring my homework and thought I was going to get into serious trouble.”

Meaning in this passage

Here, bring means to take or carry something with you to the place where you are going or to the person who needs it.

繁體中文： 把某物帶到說話者、目的地或某個相關位置；帶來 / 帶去

中文翻譯：

> “...when I forgot to bring my homework...”

「.....有一次我忘了帶功課.....」

Here:

bring my homework = 把功課帶到學校 / 帶到需要使用它的地方

1. bring = carry/take something to a person or place (帶來 / 帶去) — 帶 ; 拿來

This is the meaning used in your passage.

Meaning: To carry, take, or cause something or someone to come with you to a particular place or person.

Practice 1 — Original

> “I forgot to bring my homework.”

「我忘了帶功課。」

Practice 2

> “Please bring your passport to the appointment.”

「請在約見時帶同你的護照。」

Practice 3

> “Can you bring me a glass of water?”

「你可以拿一杯水來給我嗎？」

bring = 把某人或某物帶到某個目的地、說話者或接收者所在的位置

Common:

* bring your bag

* bring a friend

* bring me some water

* bring something to school

These belong to one central movement toward a destination/person sense.

2. bring + person (帶某人來 / 使某人到達) — 帶來 ; 帶同

Bring also applies to people.

Practice 4

> “You can bring a friend to the party.”

「你可以帶一位朋友來參加派對。」

Practice 5

> “The teacher brought the students into the hall.”

「老師帶學生進入禮堂。」

bring someone = 帶某人前往某個地方 , 或令某人到達某處

For database counting, I would merge this with Meaning 1. The object changes from a thing to a person, but the underlying concept remains movement to a destination.

3. bring = cause a result/state (結果) — 帶來 ; 造成 ; 使產生

This is a major figurative meaning.

Meaning: To cause a particular result, condition, feeling, or situation to happen.

Practice 6

> “The new system brought major improvements.”

「新系統帶來了重大改善。」

Practice 7

> “Her words brought him comfort.”

「她的話給他帶來了安慰。」

bring + result/state = 令某種結果、情況或感受出現

Common:

- * bring change
- * bring trouble
- * bring happiness
- * bring relief
- * bring benefits

This is genuinely different from physically carrying something.

4. bring someone/something into a state (使進入某狀態) — 使 ; 令

A very common construction is:

> bring + object + into/to + state

Practice 8

> “The news brought the meeting to an end.”

「這個消息使會議結束。」

Practice 9

> “The accident brought traffic to a standstill.”

「那宗意外令交通完全停頓。」

bring something to/into a state = 使某人或某物進入某種狀態或結果

For strict counting, I would merge this with Meaning 3 under the broader cause a result/state concept.

5. bring = cause someone to do/feel/realize something (使人.....) — 使 ; 令

Practice 10

> “The experience brought her to understand the problem differently.”

「那次經歷使她以不同方式理解這個問題。」

Practice 11

> “His kindness brought a smile to her face.”

「他的善意令她露出笑容。」

bring someone to + state/action = 令某人逐漸到達某種心理、情緒或行動結果

Again, this belongs to the broader cause sense.

6. bring = introduce/present something into a situation (引入) — 引入 ; 帶入

Bring can mean introducing an element, quality, perspective, or resource into something.

Practice 12

> “She brings a lot of experience to the team.”

「她為團隊帶來 / 引入很多經驗。」

Practice 13

> “The new design brings more light into the room.”

「新的設計令房間引入更多光線 / 更明亮。」

bring something to/into something = 把某種資源、特質、觀點或影響加入某個環境或情況

This is a figurative extension of the physical movement sense.

For counting, I would usually merge it with Meaning 3 because the result is “introducing/causing the presence of” something.

7. bring = sell for / achieve a price (價值) — 賣得 ; 值

In commercial contexts, bring can mean to obtain a particular price when sold.

Practice 14

> “The painting brought a high price at auction.”

「這幅畫在拍賣會上*賣得很高的價錢*。」

Practice 15

> “Old coins can sometimes bring surprisingly large sums.”

「舊硬幣有時可以*賣得令人意外的高價*。」 bring + price/sum = 出售時取得某個價格或金額

This is an established distinct sense, though less central than the first three.

8. bring = make someone appear before authority/court (正式) — 帶到 ; 送交

In legal or formal contexts:

Practice 16

> “The suspect was brought before the court.”

「疑犯被*帶到法庭*。」

Practice 17

> “The case was brought before the committee.”

「案件被提交給委員會審議。」

bring someone/something before + authority = 把人或事項正式帶到某個權力機構面前處理

The physical-human version can be grouped with Meaning 1; the case/issue version is a formal figurative extension.

Important distinction: bring vs take

This is the most important learner contrast.

bring

usually focuses on movement toward the speaker, listener, destination, or relevant place.

> “Bring your book to class.”

= 把書帶到課堂來。 take

usually focuses on movement away from the current point toward another place.

> “Take this book home.”

= 把這本書帶回家。

The exact choice depends on viewpoint.

Important distinction: bring vs carry carry focuses on physically holding and transporting something.

bring

focuses on the destination or arrival.

> “She carried the box upstairs.”

= 強調搬運動作。

> “She brought the box upstairs.”

= 強調把箱子帶到樓上。

A person may carry something without bringing it to a particular destination.

Important distinction: bring vs fetch

bring

= take something/someone to a destination.

fetch

= go somewhere, get something/someone, and bring it back.

> “Bring me the file.”

= 把檔案帶來。

> “Fetch me the file.”

= 去把檔案拿來。

So fetch contains the extra “go and get” stage.

Important distinction: bring vs cause

cause

is the broad neutral verb for producing a result.

bring

often sounds more natural when the result is treated as something that “comes into” a situation.

> “The changes brought improvements.”

> “The changes caused problems.”

Both are possible, but bring is often more idiomatic with positive/neutral outcomes such as:

- * relief
- * change
- * benefits
- * happiness

Useful construction: bring someone something — 給某人帶來某物

Practice 18

> “She brought me some tea.”

「她給我拿來了一些茶。」

Practice 19

> “Can you bring us the menu?”

「你可以給我們拿來餐牌嗎？」

Pattern:

> bring + person + thing

= 把某物帶給某人

Useful construction: bring something with you — 隨身帶上

Practice 20

> “Remember to bring an umbrella with you.”

「記得帶把雨傘在身上。」

Practice 21

> “You don’t need to bring anything with you.”

「你不需要隨身帶任何東西。」

This is particularly useful for learners because with you makes the movement-with-person idea explicit.

Family-extension note

The practical morphological family is small:

* bring
* brings
* brought
* bringing

The learning burden comes mainly from its broad constructions rather than derivational forms.

Useful patterns include:

* bring something
* bring someone
* bring someone something
* bring something to someone
* bring change
* bring relief
* bring something to an end
* bring something into a situation
* bring a high price

The Golden Manual says grammar-rich words may have small morphological families but several useful semantic constructions, and these should be audited without artificially multiplying overlapping senses.

Master comparison

Form / sense	MCQ-ready Traditional Chinese meaning
-----	-----
bring — physical movement	把某人或某物帶到某個目的地、接收者或相關位置
bring — cause a result/state	令某種結果、情況、感受或變化出現
bring something into a situation	把某種資源、特質、影響或元素加入某個情況；與 cause/introduction 義相關
bring + price	某物出售時取得某個價格或金額
bring before authority	把某人或事項正式帶到法庭、委員會等權力機構面前處理
brought	bring 的過去式及過去分詞

For your original sentence

> “I forgot to bring my homework...”

The exact meaning is:

bring = 把某物帶到需要使用它的目的地

Here, the implied destination is school/class.

So:

> bring my homework

= 把功課帶到學校 / 帶功課

For your database, I would count 4 genuinely useful core meanings for bring:

1. carry/take someone or something to a destination
2. cause a result, state, feeling, or change
3. introduce/add something to a situation
4. obtain a price when sold

I would merge bring someone / bring something / bring something before a court into #1 where the movement remains literal, and merge bring something to an end / bring relief / bring change under #2 rather than inflate the count.