hum

= continuous low smooth sound.

buzz

= usually rougher, more vibrating, insect-like or electrical.

> hum of an air conditioner

> = 冷氣機低沉的嗡嗡聲

> buzz of a bee

> = 蜜蜂嗡嗡聲

They overlap, but buzz often feels sharper and more vibrating.

beep

= short clear electronic tone.

buzz

= lower, vibrating or humming alert.

> phone beeped

> = 手機嗶一聲

> phone buzzed

> = 手機嗡 / 震動一下

This is directly relevant to your passage.

Important distinction: buzz vs vibration

vibration

= physical shaking itself.

buzz

= may refer to:

* vibration,

* the sound caused by it,

* or both.

So:

> “My phone buzzed.”

can naturally mean:

> 手機震動了一下

even if it made almost no audible sound.

Important distinction: buzz vs hype

You already have hype mapped.

buzz

= spontaneous excitement, attention, chatter.

hype

= intensive promotion/publicity, often deliberately created and sometimes exaggerated.

> positive buzz around a film

> = 電影周圍的熱烈討論

> marketing hype

> = 市場炒作

rumour

= unverified claim/information.

Buzz does not necessarily contain one specific claim.

Something may have lots of buzz before it becomes genuinely popular.

> personal buzz

> = 個人的刺激興奮感

> buzz around an event

> = 活動周圍的熱烈氣氛

Important distinction: buzz — sound vs social attention

Sound:

> “The phone gave a buzz.”

= 手機震動 / 嗡了一下。

Social:

> “The video created a buzz.”

= 那段影片引起熱議。

Same word, completely different domain.

Excellent MCQ contrast.

Important distinction: buzzing — sound vs lively place

Sound:

> “The light is buzzing.”

= 燈發出嗡嗡聲。

Lively:

> “The café is buzzing.”

= 咖啡店非常熱鬧。

Strong contextual contrast.

Important distinction: buzzing — informal emotional use

In some informal BrE:

> “I’m buzzing!”

can mean:

> 我超興奮 / 超開心！

Example:

> “I passed the exam—I’m buzzing!”

「我考試合格了，我現在超興奮！」

This is conversational and particularly BrE.

Important distinction: get a buzz from X

> “I get a buzz from performing.”

does not mean:

> I hear a buzzing noise.

It means:

> 我從表演中獲得刺激 / 興奮感。

Excellent idiomatic contrast.
