Important distinction: connection vs relationship

relationship

broader and usually emphasizes the ongoing nature of how people/things relate.

connection

often emphasizes the link itself or a sense of closeness.

> “They have a good relationship.”

= 他們關係良好。

> “They felt an immediate connection.”

= 他們很快就感到有一種親近 / 契合感。

Important distinction: connection vs contact

contact

can mean communication or a person you know.

connection

suggests a stronger link, association, or useful relationship.

> “Keep in contact.”

= 保持聯絡。

> “He has connections in the industry.”

= 他在業內有人脈。

Important distinction: connection vs link

These overlap heavily.

often neutral and direct:

= 連結 / 關聯

connection

can additionally emphasize:

* emotional bond;

- * transport transfer;
- * technical connection;
- * social network.

So connection has a wider everyday range.

Important distinction: connection vs association

association

often means a general relationship in thought/statistics/social affiliation.

connection

can be stronger or more concrete.

> “There is an association between A and B.”

common in research.

> “There is a physical connection between A and B.”

more concrete.

Important distinction: connection vs connectivity

connection

one actual link.

> “My internet connection failed.”

connectivity

overall ability/quality of being connected.

> “The area has poor internet connectivity.”

So:

> connection = 一次 / 一條連線

> connectivity = 整體連接能力 / 連通程度

Important distinction: connect vs relate

connect emphasizes linking two things.

relate

can mean showing how things are associated, or identifying personally with something.

> “Connect theory and practice.”

= 把理論和實踐連起來。

> “I can relate to that experience.”

= 我能對那段經歷產生共鳴。

Important distinction: connected vs related

connected

often suggests a direct or meaningful link.

related

broader:

may simply belong to the same topic/family/category.

> “These two incidents are connected.”

may suggest one has a direct link with the other.

> “These two topics are related.”

may only mean they concern similar subject matter.

Important distinction: connected vs well-connected

connected

= linked/related.

well-connected

= having useful or influential social contacts.

> “The devices are connected.”

> “He is well-connected.”

Completely different contextual meaning.

Important distinction: connection vs transfer

In travel:

connection

= the onward transport service or transfer link.

transfer

= the actual act/process of changing vehicles.

> “I have a connection in Tokyo.”

= 我要在東京轉機。

> “The transfer takes 40 minutes.”

= 轉機過程需要 40 分鐘。

Important distinction: connection vs signal

signal

= transmitted radio/electronic signal strength.

connection

= whether communication link is established and working.

You can have:

- * a weak signal but still a connection;
- * no connection at all.

Family-extension sweep

After the full audit, the useful modern family includes:

- * connection — physical link = 連接 / 連結
- * connection — relationship = 關係 / 聯繫
- * connection — emotional bond = 情感連結 / 親近感
- * connection — ideas/events = 關聯
- * connection — causal/abstract link = 因果 / 邏輯聯繫
- * connection — transport transfer = 轉機 / 轉車
- * connection — transport link = 接駁 / 交通聯繫
- * connection — internet/network = 網絡連線
- * connection — phone = 通話連接
