Practice 64

> “The gallery deals in modern art.”

「這間畫廊經營現代藝術品買賣。」

deal in X = 以買賣 X 為業

This phrasal/prepositional construction is very closely tied to dealer, so it is worth noting despite the usual phrasal-verb restraint.

AQ. DEALER = SOMEONE WHO “DEALS IN” SOMETHING

Semantic link:

> art dealer

> = person who deals in art

> car dealer

> = person/company that deals in cars

> securities dealer

> = entity that deals in securities

This is the core word-family bridge.

> “The company was accused of illegal dealing.”

AX. DEALER AS “ONE WHO GIVES OUT”

There are occasional creative/figurative compounds where dealer means:

> someone who regularly gives/provides something.

Examples can be playful:

> hope dealer

> dream dealer

But these are productive metaphors, not stable core dictionary senses.

For our database:

> do not promote as separate lexical senses.

AY. “DEALER’S CHOICE”

47. dealer’s choice = 由發牌者選擇玩法；莊家選擇制

A card-game expression.

Practice 77

> “Tonight we’re playing dealer’s choice.”

「今晚我們玩由莊家選擇牌局玩法的形式。」

Practice 78

> “In dealer’s choice, the dealer selects the game.”

「在 dealer’s choice 中，由發牌者決定玩哪一種牌局。」

Low priority but established.

AZ. “DEALER’S PRICE”

Not a distinct lexical sense; simply:

> price offered/set by dealer.

Similarly:

- * dealer invoice
- * dealer stock
- * dealer network
- * dealer service

These are productive business compounds rather than separate meanings.

BA. CAR DEALER VS CAR SALES PERSON

This is particularly important for your passage.

car dealer

can mean:

1. the business
2. the person/company professionally selling cars

car salesperson

= individual employee who talks to customers and sells cars

So:

> “Hong Kong car dealers should explain battery warranties clearly.”

most naturally means:

> the car-selling businesses/industry

not merely:

> individual sales staff.

BB. CAR DEALER VS MANUFACTURER

manufacturer

= makes the cars.

dealer

= sells them to customers.

Typical structure:

- > manufacturer
- > → distributor/importer
- > → dealer
- > → customer

Depending on market, some stages may be combined.

BC. DEALER VS IMPORTER

importer

= brings goods into a country/market.

dealer

= sells them.

A company may perform both roles.

BD. AUTHORIZED DEALER VS INDEPENDENT DEALER

48. authorized dealer = 官方授權經銷商

independent dealer

= not necessarily tied to a manufacturer's official sales network.

Practice 79

> "The vehicle was sold by an independent dealer."

「這輛車由一間獨立車商出售。」

Practice 80

> "Authorized and independent dealers may offer different warranties."

「授權經銷商與獨立車商可能提供不同保養。」

BE. DEALER VS FRANCHISEE

franchisee

= party licensed to operate under a franchise system.

dealer

= party authorized to sell a product.

A franchised dealer may be both, but the legal relationship is not automatically identical.

BF. DEALER IN FINANCE VS CAR DEALER

The common concept is:

> professional buying/selling intermediary or principal

But the mechanics differ:

car dealer

= sells physical goods

securities dealer

= trades financial assets

art dealer

= trades artwork

So these are domain extensions of one broad commercial core rather than completely unrelated homonyms.

This is exactly where we should merge conceptually rather than over-split.

BG. DEALER IN CARDS IS A GENUINELY DISTINCT BRANCH

Unlike the commercial senses, the card-game dealer comes from:

> deal = distribute cards

not:

> trade goods.

Therefore:

> dealer — trader/seller

> and

> dealer — card distributor

should be treated as genuinely distinct lexical branches.

BH. DRUG DEALER — SAME COMMERCIAL CORE

Although drug dealer feels semantically strong, it still fits:

> person who trades/sells a class of goods.

The difference is:

> the goods are illegal/controlled.

So it is important vocabulary, but not conceptually a wholly separate core meaning from:

> art dealer / car dealer.

BI. DEALER AS MARKET-MAKER — FINANCIAL NUANCE

A securities dealer often does more than ordinary retail selling.

It may:

- * buy for its own inventory
- * sell from inventory
- * quote bid/ask prices
- * provide market liquidity

So the best Chinese can be:

> 交易商 rather than:

> 經銷商.

BJ. DEALER VS MARKET MAKER

dealer

= firm/person trading on own account.

market maker

= dealer committed to quoting buy/sell prices and providing liquidity.

A market maker is typically a type of dealer.

Not every dealer is necessarily a formal market maker.

BK. DEALERSHIP VS SHOWROOM

dealership

= entire business/authorized outlet.

showroom

= physical display/sales area.

A dealership may contain:

- * showroom
- * workshop
- * finance desk
- * parts department

So:

> dealership ≠ showroom.

BL. DEALERSHIP VS GARAGE

dealership

= sells vehicles, often provides service.

garage

= may only repair/store vehicles.

A garage is not necessarily a dealer.

BM. DEALERSHIP VS DISTRIBUTORSHIP

dealership

= authorized selling arrangement/outlet.

distributorship

= rights/business of distributing products, often to dealers/retailers.

The latter usually sits further upstream.

BN. DEALER'S ROLE IN YOUR PASSAGE

The passage says:

> “This contrast should make Hong Kong policymakers, car dealers and drivers reflect...”

The three groups represent different parts of the EV transition:

- * policymakers → rules/incentives/infrastructure
- * dealers → selling, explaining, financing, advising customers
- * drivers → purchasing and using vehicles

So car dealers here means more than:

> “people standing in a showroom.”

It refers broadly to:

> the commercial businesses and professionals through which cars are marketed and sold to consumers.

BO. PRONUNCIATION

dealer /'di:lə(r)/

dealership /'di:ləʃɪp/

dealing /'di:lɪŋ/

dealings /'di:lɪŋz/

No major stress shift.

BP. FAMILY-EXTENSION SWEEP
