Meaning in this passage

When differences are managed maturely, diversity becomes an advantage rather than a source of division.

Here, division means:

disagreement, separation, or hostility that causes people within a group to become opposed to one another — 分裂; 不和; 分歧

The writer means that personality differences do not have to break a team into opposing camps.

If badly managed:

If well managed:

AE. IMPORTANT DISTINCTIONS

Important distinction 1: division vs difference difference

simply not being the same.

division

the difference has created separation, opposition or distinct groups.

personality difference 性格差異

personality differences becoming a source of division 性格差異變成群體分裂的來源

So in your passage:

difference ≠ automatically division.

Important distinction 2: division vs disagreement

disagreement

people hold different opinions.

division

the disagreement has become deep enough to separate the group.

Sequence may be:

difference → disagreement → conflict → division.

Important distinction 3: division vs conflict

conflict

active clash/dispute.

division

state of separation into opposing groups.

Conflict can cause division.

A divided organisation may remain divided even when there is no argument happening at that moment.

Important distinction 4: division vs clash

From your previous word:

clash

the active collision.

division

the separation that can result.

personalities clash 性格衝突

repeated clashes create division 反覆衝突造成分裂

broader; there may be two or many camps.

Polarization is a particular kind of division.

Important distinction 8: division vs segregation

segregation

deliberate/systematic separation of groups, often physically or institutionally.

division

may simply refer to social/political disagreement.

Do not automatically treat social division as formal segregation.

Important distinction 9: divide vs separate

divide

split one whole into parts or create distinct sides.

separate two fighting employees 把兩名打架員工分開

divide a team into groups 把團隊分組

Important distinction 10: divide vs split

split

more everyday and often implies breaking/separating.

divide

more neutral/formal, especially for structured allocation.

split the bill 分帳

divide responsibilities
分配職責

Both often overlap.

Important distinction 11: divide vs distribute

From your earlier distribution entry:

divide

separate an amount/whole into portions.

distribute give those portions/items to recipients or spread them around.

Example:

divide the work into four parts 把工作分成四部分

distribute the four parts among team members 把四部分分配給成員

organizational/business category.

branch

often physical/geographical office/location.

Consumer Division
消費者事業部

smaller part created within a division or other larger unit.

The prefix sub- means:

under / smaller part.

Important distinction 18: divide opinion vs be controversial

divide opinion

people actually split into different views.

controversial

likely to cause or actually causes public disagreement.

A controversial issue often divides opinion, but the expressions are not identical.

the disagreement actively separates people/groups.

Divisive often sounds more negative.

Important distinction 20: divisive vs divided divisive

causes division.

彼此獨立的不同機構

Important distinction 22: divide between vs division between

Verb:

The issue divides the two groups.

Noun:

There is a division between the two groups.

Same underlying concept, different grammar.

Important distinction 23: divide between vs divide among

For distributing:

Traditional learner rule:

- between → two
- among → three or more.

Modern English also uses between with more than two when individual relationships/shares are clearly distinct.

For learners, the traditional rule is still a useful default.

Important distinction 24: division vs divide as nouns

Compare:

social division
the state/process of separation.

social divide
the gap/boundary between groups.

Example:

inequality causes social division
不平等造成社會分裂

Verb/participle:

ten divided by two.

Important distinction 27: division by zero

A major mathematical fixed expression.

Practice

Division by zero is undefined in ordinary real-number arithmetic.

在一般實數算術中，除以零沒有定義。

This is different from:

zero divided by five = zero.

Important distinction 28: dividend: math vs finance

Math:

dividend = 被除數.

Finance:

dividend = 公司向股東分派的股息／股利.

Example:

The company paid a dividend to shareholders.
公司向股東派發股息。

The two are modern lexicalized senses and must not be confused.

AF. DIVIDEND = FINANCIAL DISTRIBUTION

A profitable company does not necessarily distribute all—or any—profit as dividends.

Important distinction 30: division sign vs slash is called the division sign.

But in:

- computing,
- algebra,
- calculators,

the slash:

is very commonly used for division.

Both can describe cells dividing, but:

cell division

is the established biological term.

Important distinction 32: division in sport vs league

league

the whole competition/organisation.

division

weight division

≈ weight class

Both mean a competition category based on body weight.

Important distinction 34: military division vs brigade

Exact structures vary, but generally:

division

larger formation.

brigade

smaller formation often forming part of a division.

Do not assume exact personnel numbers universally.

Important distinction 38: division in your passage

The exact wording is:

diversity becomes an advantage rather than a source of division.

This is a deliberate contrast:

diversity

people are different.

division

those differences separate people into opposing groups.

So the passage is saying:

difference itself is not the problem.

The problem is what happens when difference becomes:

- personal hostility,
- mutual distrust,
- camps,
- refusal to cooperate.

With mature management:

diversity → broader perspectives.

Without it:

diversity → conflict → division.

For your original sentence

When differences are managed maturely, diversity becomes an advantage rather than a source of division.

division = 團隊成員因彼此差異處理不當，而逐漸形成對立、隔閡、不信任甚至不同陣營的狀態

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

當差異得到成熟處理時，多樣性便會成為優勢，而不是造成分裂／不和的來源。

The cleanest learner contrast is:

difference = 只是不同

disagreement = 意見不一致

clash = 不同立場／性格正面碰撞

conflict = 更廣義的衝突

division = 衝突已經破壞群體的整體性，令成員出現隔閡或分成不同陣營

divide = 使.....分裂／分開

divisive = 會造成分裂的

divide (noun) = 兩方之間的鴻溝

And the passage's logic can be mapped very neatly:

diversity = 有不同的人和觀點

clash = 差異發生碰撞

↓ repeated/personalised

conflict = 持續衝突

↓ trust weakens division = 團隊開始真正分裂

So division is the point where ordinary human difference stops enriching the team and starts breaking its unity.
