describes great distance.

away

describes distance from a reference point.

店很遠。

> The shop is two kilometres away.

店離這裏兩公里。

Away works naturally with exact distances; far usually does not:

far

distance.

long

length or duration.

> How far is it?

有多遠？

> How long is the road?

條路有多長？

> How long did it take?

用了多久？

Important distinction 3: far vs distant

far

very common adverb/adjective.

distant

usually adjective and often sounds more formal.

> a faraway village

遙遠村莊

> a distant village

遙遠村莊

But:

> travel far

> travel distant

> much more thoughtful

Both mean:

有心想得多

Far more can sound slightly stronger or more emphatic.

遠遠是最好

So:

* far commonly modifies comparatives
* by far commonly emphasizes superlatives

by far

= 明顯地 ; 遠遠地

Distance

> as far as the station

一直到車站

Knowledge

> as far as I know

據我所知

Opinion

> as far as I'm concerned

就我而言

Same surface phrase, distinct functions.

Important distinction 10: farther vs further

A useful learner rule:

farther

especially physical distance.

further

physical distance or figurative/additional development.

> farther down the road

> further down the road

both possible.

But:

> further information

> farther information

Important distinction 11: further vs more

further

often more formal and emphasizes continuation/addition.

more

general quantity.

> further discussion

進一步討論

> more discussion

更多討論

Both may work, but nuance differs.

Important distinction 12: go too far vs travel too far

Literal

> We travelled too far.

我們走得太遠。

Figurative

> Your comment went too far.

你的說話太過分。

Context determines whether the “distance” is physical or metaphorical.

Important distinction 13: a far cry from vs far from

far from perfect

遠非完美

a far cry from the original

跟原本相差很遠

A far cry from compares two things; far from + adjective denies a description.

Important distinction 14: far-reaching vs faraway

faraway

physically/temporally distant.

far-reaching

effects extend widely.
