Meaning in this passage

> Such conflict is not only emotionally draining but also professionally damaging, because it weakens trust, which is the foundation of all effective teamwork.

Here, foundation means:

the essential underlying basis on which something depends — 基礎；根基

The writer means that effective teamwork depends fundamentally on trust.

Without trust:

- * people may hide information,
- * question each other's motives,
- * avoid cooperation,
- * become defensive,
- * communicate less openly.

So trust is not literally underneath a team like concrete underneath a building. It is a figurative foundation.

中文翻譯：

這種衝突不但令人情緒疲憊，在工作層面上也具有破壞性，因為它會削弱信任，而信任正是所有有效團隊合作的基礎 / 根基。

Practice 1

> The rumour has no foundation in fact.

這個謠言沒有任何事實根據。

Practice 2

> The allegation appears to have little foundation in evidence.

該指控看來幾乎沒有證據支持。

V. FOUNDATION vs BASIS

Important distinction 1: foundation vs basis

These overlap strongly.

foundation

often emphasizes:

- * something fundamental,
- * something other things are built upon,
- * long-term structural support.

basis

often emphasizes:

- * reason,
- * principle,
- * method,
- * factual grounds.

Compare:

> Trust is the foundation of teamwork.

> 信任是團隊合作的*根基*。

> The decision was made on the basis of evidence.

> 決定是*以證據為依據*作出的。

Both can translate as 「基礎」, but the metaphor differs.

Important distinction 2: foundation vs base

base

physical or conceptual bottom/support; often more general.

foundation

especially something built to support an entire structure/system.

> base of a lamp

> 燈座 > foundation of a building

> 建築地基

Figuratively:

> knowledge base > 知識庫 / 知識基礎

> foundation of knowledge > 知識根基

Important distinction 3: foundation vs groundwork

foundation

underlying base itself.

groundwork

preparatory work done before later work can happen.

> lay the foundation for cooperation > 奠定合作基礎

> do the groundwork for negotiations > 為談判做前期準備

Closely related, but not identical.

Important distinction 4: foundation vs cornerstone

foundation

whole underlying base.

cornerstone

one especially important central element.

> Trust is the foundation of teamwork.
> 信任是團隊合作的整體根基。

> Honesty is a cornerstone of trust.
> 誠實是信任的一塊重要基石。

Important distinction 5: foundation vs framework

foundation

basic support.

framework

organized structure that gives shape to how something works.

> foundation = 根基

> framework = 架構

A framework may be built on a foundation.

Important distinction 6: foundation vs structure

foundation

supports the structure.

structure

the organized arrangement built above/around it.

This literal relationship carries into figurative language.

Important distinction 7: foundation vs principle

principle

basic rule/belief.

foundation

may consist of one or several principles, conditions, facts, or relationships.

> respect is a principle

> respect forms part of the foundation of teamwork

Important distinction 8: foundation vs prerequisite

prerequisite

something required beforehand.

foundation

something that supports later development.

A prerequisite may be completed and left behind; a foundation continues to support the whole structure.

Important distinction 9: foundation vs starting point

starting point

where something begins.

foundation

what continues to support it.

A shared objective may be a starting point; trust may be the deeper foundation.

Important distinction 10: foundation vs background knowledge

background knowledge information already known about a subject.

foundational knowledge

essential core knowledge needed for more advanced learning.

Not all background knowledge is foundational.

Important distinction 11: foundation vs root

root

origin/deep underlying source.

foundation

supporting base.

> root cause

> 根本原因

> foundation of cooperation

> 合作基礎

The metaphors differ:

* root → plant/origin

* foundation → building/support.

Important distinction 12: foundation vs origin

origin

where something begins or comes from.

foundation

what something rests upon.

> origin of the conflict

> 衝突的起源

> foundation of trust

> 信任的根基

Important distinction 13: foundation vs establishment

In:

> the foundation of the university foundation can mean:

the act of establishing it

But:

> the university's foundation

could also refer to a separate foundation organisation connected with the university.

Context is essential.

Important distinction 14: foundation = basis vs foundation = organisation

Compare:

> Trust is the foundation of teamwork.

> 基礎

> She works for a charitable foundation.

> 基金會

Completely different noun senses.

Important distinction 15: foundation = building base vs figurative basis

Literal:

> concrete foundation

> 混凝土地基

Figurative:

> foundation of trust

> 信任基礎

The figurative sense derives very transparently from the physical building metaphor.

Important distinction 16: foundation vs foundations plural

Physical building usage very often uses plural:

> the foundations of the house

because a building's supporting foundation system has multiple parts.

Figuratively, both occur:

> foundation of trust

> foundations of democracy

Plural often suggests several underlying elements.

Important distinction 17: lay the foundation vs build on the foundation

lay the foundation

create the basic conditions.

build on the foundation

develop further after the basics already exist.

Sequence:

> lay foundation → build on it → develop full structure

Important distinction 18: found vs establish

found

especially create an organisation/institution that did not previously exist.

establish

broader:

* create organisation,

* establish rule,

* establish fact,

* establish relationship.

> found a university ✓

> establish a university ✓

But:

> establish the truth

> found the truth

Important distinction 19: found vs set up

found

formal, emphasizes original creation.

set up

everyday/business English, broader and less ceremonial.

> She founded the company.

> 她是公司的創辦人。

> She set up a small business.

> 她開了一盤小生意。

Both can describe creation, but found strongly foregrounds founder status.

Important distinction 20: found vs create create

bring anything into existence.

found

specifically establish:

* company,

* organisation,

* institution,

* city,

* movement.

> create a document

> found a company

Important distinction 21: founder vs owner

founder

created the organisation.

owner

owns it.

A founder may later sell the company and no longer be an owner.

An owner may buy a company they did not found.

Important distinction 22: founder vs CEO

founder

historical creation role.

CEO

current executive management role.

One person may be both, but the titles mean different things.

Important distinction 23: founder vs founding member

founder

actively establishes organisation.

founding member

one of its earliest members at establishment.

A founding member is not necessarily the main founder.

Important distinction 24: be founded in vs be founded on

Crucial grammar distinction.

founded in 2010

= 創立於 2010 年

founded on trust

= 建立在信任之上

Same participle, totally different relationship.

Important distinction 25: founded on vs based on

Very close.

neutral/common.

founded on

more formal and often emphasizes a deep underlying basis.

> decision based on data

> 根據數據作出的決定

> relationship founded on trust

> 建立在信任上的關係

Important distinction 26: well-founded vs founded

founded

can mean:

* established,

* based on.

well-founded

means:

> supported by good reasons/evidence.

> well-founded concern

> 有根據的憂慮

It does not mean “an organisation that was founded well.”

Important distinction 27: unfounded vs false

unfounded

lacks evidence/support.

false

actually untrue.

An allegation can be unfounded because there is insufficient evidence, without necessarily proving its exact opposite.

This distinction can matter in careful writing.

Important distinction 28: foundation vs charity

foundation

a particular organisational/legal model that may fund or conduct charitable/public-benefit work.

charity

broader category of charitable organisations/activities.

Not every charity is called a foundation, and not every entity called a foundation operates identically.

Important distinction 29: foundation vs fund

foundation

organisation.

fund

pool of money/assets.

> a research foundation

> 研究基金會

> a research fund

> 研究基金

A foundation may manage one or several funds.

Important distinction 30: foundation funding vs government funding

foundation funding

money from a foundation organisation.

government funding public-sector money.

Same concept of financing, different source.

Important distinction 31: foundation makeup vs base makeup

In cosmetics:

foundation

specific complexion product applied to even skin tone.

base

broader and can include:

* primer,

- * foundation,
- * other preparatory products.

Important distinction 32: foundation vs concealer

foundation

applied more broadly to even overall complexion.

concealer

applied more selectively to cover particular:

- * blemishes,
- * dark circles,
- * marks.

Important distinction 33: foundation course vs foundation degree

Crucial education distinction.

foundation course/year

preparatory study, often before a degree.

foundation degree

a particular UK higher-education qualification.

They are not interchangeable.

Important distinction 34: foundation year vs first year

foundation year

preparatory year before standard degree-level first year in many programmes.

first year

first normal year of the degree proper.

Institutional structures vary, but learners should not automatically merge them.

Important distinction 35: foundational vs fundamental

Very close.

foundational

serves as the base on which later things are built.

fundamental

extremely basic, central or essential to the nature of something.

> foundational skill

> a skill needed before later skills

> fundamental principle

> a deeply basic principle

They often overlap.

Important distinction 36: foundational vs basic basic

simple/elementary/core.

foundational

supports more advanced structures or learning.

Something can be basic without being particularly foundational.

Important distinction 37: foundation and your earlier “premise”

premise

proposition/assumption from which an argument proceeds.

foundation

broader supporting basis.

> premise of an argument

> 論證前提

> foundation of a theory

> 理論基礎

A theory's foundation can include several premises, evidence, principles and methods.

Important distinction 38: foundation and structure in your teamwork passage

Your passage earlier used:

> clear structures

and now:

> trust is the foundation

This is a useful distinction:

structure

organises how teamwork operates:

* roles,

* meetings,

* responsibilities,

* communication channels.

foundation

makes the whole system viable:

* trust.

A team can have formal structure without a strong foundation of trust.

Important distinction 39: foundation and trust

In your sentence:

> trust is the foundation of all effective teamwork

the meaning is stronger than:

> trust is helpful.

It means:

effective teamwork fundamentally depends on trust

The building metaphor implies:

> weaken the foundation → weaken the whole structure.

That is exactly why the preceding phrase says conflict is professionally damaging.

Family-extension note

The foundation / found family has several major modern branches:

1. abstract basis

- * foundation of trust

- * foundation for cooperation

2. strength of underlying basis

- * strong foundation

- * shaky foundation

3. establish basic conditions

- * lay the foundation

- * build a foundation

4. knowledge and education

- * foundation knowledge

- * foundation skills

5. theory / law / science

- * theoretical foundation
- * legal foundation

6. physical construction

- * building foundation
- * deep foundation

7. construction problems

- * foundation settlement
- * foundation failure

8. foundation stone

- * literal ceremonial stone
- * figurative basis

9. deep destabilisation

- * shake to its foundations

10. act of establishment

- * foundation of a city/institution

11. verb establish

- * found a company

12. basis construction

- * be founded on evidence/trust

13. person who establishes

- * founder
- * co-founder

14. establishment period

- * founding member
- * founding principles

15. evidence-based derivatives

- * well-founded
- * unfounded

16. institutional organisation

- * charitable foundation
- * private foundation

17. cosmetics

- * foundation
- * liquid foundation

18. education programmes

- * foundation course
- * foundation year
- * foundation degree

19. clothing

- * foundation garment

20. adjective

- * foundational
- * foundational principle

For your passage, the exact branch is:

foundation = the essential underlying condition on which the effectiveness and stability of teamwork depend

For your original sentence

> Such conflict is not only emotionally draining but also professionally damaging, because it weakens trust, which is the foundation of all effective teamwork.

Here:

foundation = 有效團隊合作賴以建立和維持的最根本條件

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 這種衝突不但令人情緒疲憊，在工作層面上也具有破壞性，因為它會削弱信任，而信任正是所有有效團隊合作的*基礎 / 根基*。

The cleanest learner contrast is:

- > foundation = 整個事物建立其上的根基
- > basis = 依據 / 基礎，尤其是理由、原則或證據
- > groundwork = 為後續工作所做的前期準備
- > cornerstone = 整體中一個特別重要的核心要素
- > framework = 組織事情的架構
- > prerequisite = 必須先具備的條件

> root = 起源 / 深層來源

And the passage's metaphor is particularly strong:

> trust = foundation

> teamwork = building

If conflict weakens trust, it is effectively weakening the foundation beneath the whole team. That is why the writer calls interpersonal conflict not merely unpleasant, but professionally damaging.
