

Absolutely — garden is a very good target because your passage uses it literally for your aunt's small growing area, while the word also develops useful meanings in public spaces, compounds, verbs, figurative naming, and related forms such as gardener and gardening.

Word family: garden / gardener / gardening

Base word: garden

Plural: gardens

Verb forms: garden, gardens, gardened, gardening

Related forms: gardener, gardening

Useful compounds / extensions: garden centre, garden furniture, garden shed, garden party, botanical garden, kitchen garden, roof garden, beer garden

Part of speech: noun (名詞) / verb (動詞)

Your sentence:

> "...so her tiny garden is both practical and beautiful."

Meaning in your passage: garden = area where plants are grown — 花園；園圃；種植空間

Here garden means:

> an area used for growing flowers, vegetables, herbs, or other plants, usually beside or around a home.

繁體中文：

用來種植花卉、蔬菜、香草或其他植物的空間；花園 / 園圃

Natural translation:

> "Her tiny garden is both practical and beautiful."

「她小小的花園 / 種植空間既實用又漂亮。」

Because the passage later says most plants are on the rooftop, garden here does not necessarily mean a traditional ground-level yard. It refers more broadly to her cultivated plant-growing space.

「演唱會在 Madison Square Garden 舉行。」

Practice 35

> “Some place names retain ‘Garden’ even when the modern site is not a literal garden.”

「有些地名即使現代已不是實際花園，仍保留 Garden 這個名稱。」

Important distinction: garden vs yard

Especially important regionally.

British English

garden

= residential outdoor area, especially planted.

American English

yard

= residential outdoor area generally.

American garden more strongly suggests an area specifically used to grow plants.

So:

> BrE: back garden

> AmE: backyard

But:

> vegetable garden

works in both.

Important distinction: garden vs park

garden

usually:

* more deliberately planted;

* often smaller;

* focused on flowers, vegetables, ornamental design.

park

usually:

* larger public open space;

* may contain grass, trees, sports areas, paths.

> botanical garden = 植物園

> public park = 公園

They overlap but are not identical.

Important distinction: garden vs farm

garden

small-scale growing, often domestic/ornamental.

farm

large-scale agricultural production, usually commercial or substantial.

> vegetable garden

> = 菜園

> vegetable farm

> = 蔬菜農場

Important distinction: garden vs field

garden

deliberately cultivated smaller area.

field

larger open piece of land, often for crops, grazing, sport, etc.

A rooftop collection of containers can be called a garden, but not normally a field.

Important distinction: garden vs greenhouse

garden

the growing area itself.

greenhouse

a glass/plastic structure that creates controlled growing conditions.

> plants in the garden

> = 花園裡的植物

> plants in the greenhouse

> = 溫室裡的植物

Important distinction: garden vs gardening

garden

noun:

> “Her garden is small.”

「她的花園很小。」

verb:

> “She gardens every weekend.”

「她每個週末都做園藝。」

gardening

activity:

> “Gardening helps her unwind.”

「園藝能幫助她放鬆。」

Important distinction: gardener vs farmer

gardener

cares for flowers, ornamental plants, vegetables, gardens, etc.

farmer

works in agriculture, usually producing crops/livestock on a farm.

A person growing tomatoes on a balcony is naturally a gardener, not usually a farmer.

Important distinction: garden-variety vs ordinary

ordinary

neutral:

= 普通的

garden-variety

informal and slightly colourful:

= 很普通、典型、沒有特別之處的

> “an ordinary problem”

neutral.

> “a garden-variety problem”

more conversational.
