A very common modern adjective.

### Practice 27

**overhyped = 外界宣傳、稱讚或期待高於實際品質或價值所值得的程度****

This is stronger and more explicitly negative than plain **hyped****.

---

Important distinction: **hype vs publicity****

**publicity****

= public/media attention

It can be neutral:

> “The event received a lot of publicity.”

「活動獲得大量媒體關注。」

**hype****

= publicity **plus excitement and elevated expectations**, often with a possible suggestion of exaggeration.

> “There was a lot of hype around the event.”

「活動引起很大熱度，大家對它有很高期待。」

So:

**publicity = 宣傳 / 曝光****

**hype = 宣傳 + 熱度 + 期待，有時帶誇張意味****

Important distinction: hype vs buzz

buzz

= active public conversation and excitement

「這間新餐廳最近話題很多。」

hype

can include deliberate marketing and often stronger expectations.

「這間餐廳被大量宣傳和吹捧，大家期待很高。」

buzz often feels more organic.

But they overlap.

Important distinction: hype vs advertising

advertising

= paid/promotional communication specifically intended to sell or promote something

hype

= the wider excitement and heightened expectations surrounding it

Advertising can create hype.

> Advertising → 宣傳活動

> Hype → 宣傳後形成的熱度和高期待

---

Important distinction: hype vs praise

**praise**

= positive approval of quality or achievement

**hype**

= large-scale attention/excitement, often before people have fully evaluated the thing.

> “The product received praise after launch.”

「產品推出後獲得好評。」

> “There was huge hype before launch.”

「產品推出前已有很大熱度。」

Important distinction: **hyped vs overhyped**

**hyped**

= heavily promoted / receiving lots of excitement

Not automatically negative.

**overhyped**

= promoted or praised **more than deserved**

Definitely negative.

「它宣傳得很多，但其實真的很好。」

「它被吹捧過頭了 / 名過其實。」

---

Important distinction: **live up to the hype vs worth the hype**

They are close, but slightly different.

**live up to the hype**

focuses on whether **actual performance matches previous expectations**

> “The headphones lived up to the hype.”

「耳機的實際表現達到了之前的高期待。」

**worth the hype**

focuses on whether **the attention and praise are justified**

> “The headphones are worth the hype.”

「這副耳機確實值得大家這麼稱讚和關注。」

Very similar, but the viewpoint differs.

---

Grammar note: **hype is usually uncountable**

Normally:

> “There was a lot of **hype**.”

> “Don’t believe the **hype**.”

Not normally:

> “many hypes”

When talking about separate promotional campaigns, English normally uses another noun:

> “marketing campaigns”

> “promotional claims”

> “publicity”

rather than plural **hypes**.

---

Family-extension note

After our full family sweep, the genuinely useful modern family includes:

* hype = 熱度 / 大量宣傳 / 炒作
 * the hype = 宣傳和好評造成的高期待
 * live up to the hype = 達到外界高期待 / 不負盛名
 * not live up to the hype = 未達期待 / 名不副實
 * worth the hype = 配得上熱度和好評
 * believe the hype = 相信外界宣傳和吹捧
 * all the hype = 大量熱度 / 炒作
 * hype — verb = 大力宣傳 / 炒作
 * hyped — product/event = 被大量宣傳、很有話題性的
 * hyped — person, informal = 非常興奮 / 超期待
 * overhype = 過度宣傳 / 過分吹捧
 * overhyped = 被過度吹捧的 / 名過其實的

hypebeast — 潮流炒作追隨者 / 追逐熱門潮牌的人

This is a useful modern family extension, especially in fashion/streetwear culture.

Meaning: Someone strongly focused on fashionable, heavily hyped brands, especially limited-edition streetwear or sneakers.

> “He’s a real hypebeast when it comes to sneakers.”

「說到球鞋，他真的很像一個專門追逐熱門限量潮牌的人。」

This is informal slang and culturally narrower than hype, so I would recognize it but not treat it as core vocabulary.

For your original sentence

> “A few weeks later, I bought the headphones, and they really **lived up to the hype****.”

The exact meaning is:

**the hype = 在購買之前，廣告、口碑和其他人的讚賞已經為這副耳機建立了很高的期待****

and:

**lived up to the hype = 買回來實際使用後，發現耳機的表現真的和之前大家說的一樣好，達到了那些高期待****

So the most natural translation is:

> 「幾個星期後，我買了那副耳機，而它們的表現**真的不負之前的好評和熱度****。」
