Meaning in this passage

This problem is especially serious in large organisations, where departments such as marketing, finance and operations may use different professional language and priorities.

The actual form in the passage is marketing, a member of the market family.

Here, marketing means:

the business function concerned with understanding customers and markets, promoting products or services, positioning them, and encouraging demand and sales — 市場營銷; 市場推廣

It does not simply mean “advertising”.

Marketing can include:

- understanding customer needs,
- market research,
- choosing target customers,
- product positioning,
- pricing,
- promotion,
- branding,
- distribution/channel decisions,
- measuring customer response.

Important distinction 1: market vs marketing

This is absolutely central to your passage.

the buyers, demand, trading environment, or place.

marketing

the business activity of understanding and influencing that market.

the smartphone market

智能手機市場

smartphone marketing

智能手機的市場營銷

So:

market = where/who you sell to marketing = what you do to understand, reach and persuade them

Important distinction 2: marketing ≠ advertising

advertising paid/promotional communication.

marketing

much broader, including:

- customer research,
- segmentation,
- targeting,
- product positioning,
- pricing,
- channels,
- promotion,
- branding.

Advertising is normally one component of marketing.

Important distinction 3: marketing vs sales

marketing

creates awareness, demand and positioning.

sales

directly turns prospects into paying customers.

Simplified:

marketing → attract and prepare customers
sales → secure the transaction

Real companies may overlap considerably.

Important distinction 4: market vs marketplace

market

very broad:

housing market
target market
stock market

marketplace

often:

1. physical trading place,
2. commercial environment,
3. online platform connecting buyers/sellers.

global marketplace 全球商業環境

online marketplace 網上交易平台

Important distinction 5: market vs industry

market

focuses on buyers, demand and transactions.

industry

focuses on producers/businesses carrying out a type of economic activity.

car industry

汽車產業

car market

汽車買賣市場／顧客需求

Important distinction 6: market vs sector

sector

broad category of economic activity.

market

specific environment in which buyers and sellers interact.

technology sector

科技產業範疇 smartphone market

智能手機市場

Important distinction 7: market vs demand demand

how much customers want and can buy.

market

includes customers, demand, supply, competition, prices and transactions.

So demand is one component of a market.

Important distinction 8: market share vs market size

market size

total size of the whole market.

market share

one company's portion of it.

Example:

Total market = $1 billion
Company sales = $200 million
Market share = 20%

Important distinction 9: market value vs market price

market price

actual current transaction/quoted price.

market value

estimated amount something could reasonably sell for.

For actively traded securities they may be very close, but for property or unusual assets they can differ.

Important distinction 10: market value vs book value

market value

what the market currently values something at.

book value

accounting value shown in financial records.

They can differ substantially.

Important distinction 11: market capitalization vs company value

Market capitalization specifically measures:

share price × shares outstanding

It does not automatically equal the full economic value of the entire business, because other claims such as debt matter.

Important distinction 12: market price vs market rate

market price

usually price of a specific good/asset.

market rate

prevailing level for:

- wages,
- interest,
- rent,
- professional fees,
- exchange, etc.

Important distinction 13: on the market vs in the market for Completely different.

on the market

available for sale:

The house is on the market.
房屋正在放售。

in the market for

wanting to buy:

I'm in the market for a house.
我正在物色房屋。

Seller side vs buyer side.

Important distinction 14: go to market vs go to the market

go to market

business:

launch/commercialize a product.

go to the market

physical movement:

去街市／市場。

The article the changes the likely meaning dramatically.

Important distinction 15: bring to market vs market something bring a product to market

complete development and launch it.

market a product

promote, position and sell it.

A product can already be on the market and still be heavily marketed.

Important distinction 16: target market vs market segment

market segment

one identifiable portion of the market.

target market

the segment(s) a company actively chooses to pursue.

A segment exists whether or not a company targets it.

Important distinction 17: mass market vs niche market

mass market

large broad audience.

niche market

smaller specialized audience.

Neither automatically means better or more profitable.

Important distinction 18: market leader vs market-leading market leader

noun:

a company/product holding a leading market position.

market-leading adjective:

market-leading technology.

Important distinction 19: marketable vs marketed

marketable

capable of being sold successfully.

marketed

actually promoted/offered to customers.

marketable product 有市場潛力的產品

heavily marketed product 被大量宣傳推銷的產品

A heavily marketed product may still not be marketable enough.

Important distinction 20: marketable skills

This does not mean:

selling your skills directly as goods.

It means:

skills that employers want, making you attractive in the employment market

Important distinction 21: market-oriented vs market-driven

They overlap.

market-oriented

organization deliberately focuses on understanding customers and competitors.

market-driven

actions/results are strongly caused by external market demand or competition.

market-oriented company 以市場需求為中心的企業

market-driven price increase 由市場力量帶動的加價

Important distinction 22: free market vs market economy

market economy

overall economic system using market mechanisms.

free market

emphasizes relatively low government intervention.

A real-world market economy can still contain substantial regulation.

Important distinction 23: market failure vs business failure

business failure

a company fails.

market failure

the market mechanism itself fails to produce an efficient/socially desirable allocation.

Completely different.

Important distinction 24: labour market vs job market

They overlap strongly.

job market

more everyday and job-seeker focused.

labour market

broader economic term covering:

- employment,
 - unemployment,
 - wages,
 - labour supply,
 - employer demand.

Important distinction 25: money market vs stock market

money market

short-term borrowing instruments.

stock market

ownership shares in companies.

Do not interpret money market as simply “any market involving money”.

Important distinction 26: capital market vs money market

money market

short-term funds/debt.

capital market

medium/long-term securities and financing, broadly including equity and longer-term debt.

Important distinction 27: primary vs secondary market

primary market

issuer sells newly created securities.

secondary market

investors trade existing securities with one another.

Important distinction 28: bull vs bear market

bull market

sustained rising market.

bear market

sustained falling market.

These describe broad market trends, not individual daily moves.

Important distinction 29: black market vs grey market

black market

underlying trade is illegal or deliberately outside legal controls.

grey market

goods may be genuine and legal, but the distribution route is unofficial or unauthorized.

Do not merge them.

Important distinction 30: aftermarket

This does not mean:

a market occurring later in the day.

It means:

products/services sold after the original product purchase, especially replacement parts, upgrades and accessories

Important distinction 31: marketplace of ideas

This is figurative.

There are no literal prices or purchases.

The metaphor treats ideas as competing “products” that people evaluate and accept or reject.

Important distinction 32: corner the market

This does not mean standing in a corner of a physical market.

It means:

gain such control over supply that you dominate the market

Important distinction 33: market in your passage

The passage uses:

marketing, finance and operations

So the writer is describing different business functions.

The marketing function tends to focus on questions such as:

- What do customers want?
- Which customers should we target?
- How should the product be positioned?
- How should it be priced and promoted?
- How can demand and brand awareness grow?

Meanwhile, finance may emphasize costs and returns, while operations may emphasize feasibility and execution.

That explains why these departments can develop different language and priorities.

Family-extension note

The market family has a very broad but coherent semantic network:

1. physical place for trade

- local market
- street market
- farmers' market

2. buyers / customer group

- target market
- mass market

- niche market

3. demand for a product

- market for X
- market demand

4. geographical market

- domestic market
- international market

5. particular traded sector

- housing market
- labour market
- energy market

6. economic system/mechanism

- market economy
- market forces
- market failure

7. financial trading

- stock market
- bond market
- money market
- capital market

8. price/value

- market price
- market value
- market rate

9. competitive position

- market share
- market leader
- market penetration

10. market information

- market research
- market analysis
- market intelligence

11. verb: promote/sell

- market a product
- market X to Y
- market X as Y

12. marketing function

- marketing department
- marketing strategy
- marketing campaign

13. commercial availability

- on the market
- in the market for
- take off the market

14. product launch

- bring to market
- go-to-market strategy

15. sellability

- marketable
- marketability

16. market environment/platform

- marketplace
- online marketplace

17. special channels

- black market
- grey market
- aftermarket

18. orientation/system design

- market-oriented
- market-driven
- marketisation

For your passage, the exact member and branch is:

marketing = the organisational function responsible for understanding markets and customers and promoting/positioning products or services

For your original sentence

This problem is especially serious in large organisations, where departments such as marketing, finance and operations may use different professional language and priorities.

Here:

marketing = 負責了解市場和顧客需要、確定目標顧客、定位產品、建立品牌、推廣產品並刺激市場需求的企業職能

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

這個問題在大型機構中特別嚴重，因為市場推廣／市場營銷、財務和營運等不同部門可能使用不同的專業語言，亦有不同的優先事項。

The cleanest core distinction is:

market = 市場本身：顧客、需求和交易環境

marketing = 企業為了解、接觸和影響這個市場而做的工作

advertising = 宣傳廣告，只是 marketing 的一部分

sales = 把潛在顧客轉化為實際交易

market research = 收集和分析市場／顧客資料

So in this passage, marketing is not merely 「賣廣告」. It is an entire professional business function, which helps explain why it may use different terminology and priorities from finance, operations, or compliance.
