

Absolutely — notice is a strong polysemy target because your passage uses it as a verb:

> “...and every time I looked at it, I noticed something new...”

Here notice means to become consciously aware of something by seeing, hearing, or otherwise observing it. But notice also works as a noun meaning attention, a written/public announcement, advance warning, and appears in important workplace/legal patterns such as give notice, notice period, at short notice, until further notice.

Word family: notice / noticeable / noticeably / unnoticed

Base word: notice

Verb forms: notice, notices, noticed, noticing

Related forms: noticeable, noticeably, unnoticed

Useful compounds / expressions: notice board, notice period, advance notice, short notice, give notice, take notice

Part of speech: verb (動詞) / noun (名詞)

Your source sentence:

> “...and every time I looked at it, I noticed something new...”

Meaning in your passage: notice = become aware of something through observation — 留意到；注意到；察覺到

go unnoticed = 某人 / 某事沒有被察覺或沒有獲得注意

Often used in the negative:

> did not go unnoticed

> = 明顯受到注意 / 沒有被忽略

Important distinction: notice vs see

You already curated see.

see

= 視覺上看見某物。

notice

= consciously become aware of it.

You may see something without really noticing it.

Example:

> “I saw the painting, but I didn’t notice the small reflection.”

「我看到了這幅畫，但沒有留意到那個小倒影。」

This distinction is directly relevant to your passage.

Important distinction: notice vs observe

notice

often spontaneous:

you become aware of something.

observe usually more deliberate/careful:

you watch or examine something.

> “I noticed a change.”

= 我察覺到變化。

> “I observed the changes over several weeks.”

= 我持續觀察數週內的變化。

Important distinction: notice vs realise

You already have realise mapped.

notice

= become aware through perception/observation.

realise

= become aware through thought/understanding.

> “I noticed the door was open.”

= 我注意到門開著。

> “I realised I had forgotten my key.”

= 我意識到自己忘了帶鎖匙。

There is overlap, but the route to awareness differs.

Important distinction: notice vs recognize

notice

= become aware that something is there.

recognize

= identify something/someone as familiar or known.

> “I noticed a man near the door.”

= 我留意到門旁有個男人。

> “I recognized him as my old teacher.”

= 我認出他是以前的老師。

Important distinction: notice vs attention

notice

as a noun can mean attention.

But:

> pay attention

> = 主動集中注意力

> notice

> = become aware

You can pay attention but still fail to notice a particular detail.

Important distinction: notice vs notification

notice

often:

- * formal announcement;
- * warning;
- * information displayed/given.

notification

often:

a message informing you that something has happened, especially digital/system contexts.

> notice on a door

> = 門上的告示

> phone notification

> = 手機通知

They overlap, but are not identical.

Important distinction: notice vs warning

notice

neutral:

gives information.

warning

specifically alerts people to danger/problem/consequence.

A warning can appear on a notice, but not every notice is a warning.

Important distinction: notice vs announcement

notice

often brief/written/formal information.

announcement

an act/message making something publicly known, spoken or written.

> notice on a board

> = 告示板上的通知

> announcement over the speakers

> = 廣播公告

Important distinction: notice vs sign

sign physical display carrying information/instructions, or a symbol.

notice

the written informational message itself.

A sign may contain a notice.

Example:

> “No Entry” sign

> = 禁止進入標誌

> closure notice

> = 關閉通告

Important distinction: give notice vs give a notice

give notice

fixed formal expression:

= formally announce termination/resignation.

> “She gave notice.”

= 她提出離職通知。

give someone a notice

= hand someone a written notice.

> “The landlord gave him a notice.”

= 業主給他一份通知書。

The article changes the likely meaning.

Important distinction: notice period vs advance notice

notice period

formal contractual period before termination.

advance notice

general early warning/information before any event.

> one-month notice period

> = 一個月離職 / 終止通知期

> advance notice of a meeting

> = 會議提前通知

Important distinction: noticeable vs noticeable?

Important learner point:

noticeable means:

> easy to notice

It does not mean:

> “someone who notices things.”

For a person good at noticing details, say:

* observant

* attentive

Grammar note: notice + bare infinitive vs -ing

This is high-value.

Complete event

> “I noticed her leave.”

= 我注意到她離開這整個動作。

Ongoing action

> “I noticed her leaving.”

= 我注意到她當時正在離開。

Both are grammatical; aspect differs.

Family-extension sweep

After the full audit, the useful modern family includes:

* notice — perceive/become aware = 注意到 / 察覺到

* notice that... = 注意到某事實

* notice + wh-clause = 留意到某方面
