

Word family: outing / outings / out / outed / outing

Target word: outing

Part of speech: mainly noun

Related forms / useful extensions:

outing (n.) — 郊遊；短途外出；集體活動；公開揭露私人身份

out (v.) — 公開揭露某人的私人身份 / 秘密

outed (v./participle) — 被公開揭露身份的

family outing — 家庭出遊

school outing — 學校旅行 / 校外活動

company outing — 公司集體活動

day outing / day out — 一日遊

team outing — 團隊外出活動

Important family note:

I would not merge the enormous general word family of `out` into this entry. Modern out has many independent meanings and grammar functions. Here, only the directly relevant branch out → outing = 公開揭露某人的秘密身份 is worth bringing in.

Meaning in this passage

> ...a few tickets and receipts from family outings we had shared over the years.

Here, outings means:

short trips or recreational activities away from home, done together as a family — 家庭出遊；家庭外出活動

These may have been trips to attractions, restaurants, museums, parks, etc. The exact activities are not specified.

中文翻譯：

.....以及一些我們多年來一起家庭出遊時留下的票根和收據。

Important distinction 1: outing vs trip

outing

usually:

- * relatively short
- * recreational
- * often a day activity
- * often with family, school, company, etc.

trip

much broader:

- * short or long
- * business or leisure
- * may involve overnight travel

> a family outing to the zoo

一家人去動物園玩

> a business trip to Singapore

去新加坡公幹

So an outing is a kind of trip, but not every trip is an outing.

Important distinction 2: outing vs journey

outing

focuses on the recreational activity.

journey

focuses on travelling from one place to another.

> a museum outing

博物館外出活動

> a three-hour train journey

三小時火車旅程

Important distinction 3: outing vs excursion

These are close.

outing

ordinary and broad.

excursion

slightly more formal and often means an organised short trip, sometimes specifically from a holiday location.

> school outing

學校旅行

> boat excursion

短途遊船活動

Important distinction 4: outing vs picnic

outing

any recreational external activity.

picnic

specifically involves eating outdoors.

A picnic can be part of an outing, but the two are not synonymous.

Important distinction 5: outing vs holiday / vacation

outing

usually short and often lasts only part of a day or one day.

holiday/vacation

typically longer time away from everyday routine.

So the family activities in your passage sound more like outings than full holidays.

Important distinction 6: outing vs day out

Very close.

outing

slightly more organised or group-oriented.

day out

very natural conversational BrE:

= spending a day somewhere for enjoyment.

> a family outing

> a family day out

Both are natural, but the tone differs slightly.

Important distinction 7: family outing vs family trip

family outing

usually shorter and recreational.

family trip

broader and can include:

- * long travel
- * overnight stays
- * holidays

Because the passage mentions saved tickets and receipts over many years, either could occur in real life, but the writer specifically chose outing, suggesting individual shared excursions.

Important distinction 8: outing vs event

event

organized occurrence.

outing

specifically involves going somewhere away from the usual location.

A company dinner at another venue can be an outing; a meeting held in the office is an event but not normally an outing.

Important distinction 9: outing in sports

A sports outing does not mean the players went sightseeing.

It means:

a particular competitive appearance or performance

> his best outing of the season

= 他今季其中一次最佳上場表現

This is an established domain-specific extension.

Important distinction 10: outing = excursion vs outing = exposure

These are completely different modern senses.

Recreational

> a family outing

家庭出遊

Disclosure

> the outing of an anonymous person

公開揭露匿名人士身份

Learners need to rely heavily on context.

Important distinction 11: outing someone vs revealing information

reveal information

very broad.

out someone

specifically exposes a person's hidden/private identity or status, often without their consent.

So out has a stronger personal-privacy nuance.

Important distinction 12: outing vs coming out

Very important.

come out

a person voluntarily discloses their own identity, especially sexual orientation or gender identity.

out someone

another person discloses it, often without permission.

These are ethically and semantically very different.

Family-extension note

Outing has two major modern lexical branches:

1. recreational short trip

- * family outing
- * school outing
- * company outing
- * day outing

2. public exposure of a private identity

- * the outing of someone
- * out someone
- * be outed

There is also a narrower domain extension:

3. sports/public appearance

- * a successful outing
- * first competitive outing

The recreational sense ultimately reflects the idea of going out somewhere, while the disclosure sense comes from out = bring something hidden into the open.

They are sufficiently different that they should be taught as separate senses.

Master comparison

Form / expression	Traditional Chinese	Core idea
-----	-----	-----
outing	出遊；郊遊	recreational trip
family outing	家庭出遊	family activity
school outing	學校旅行 / 校外活動	organized school trip
company outing	公司集體活動	employee recreation
team outing	團隊外出活動	group bonding
go on an outing	去郊遊 / 出遊	take short trip
day outing	一日遊	one-day trip
day out	外出玩一天	recreational day
outing (sports)	一次出場 / 上場表現	competitive appearance
outing (disclosure)	公開揭露私人身份	exposure
out someone	公開某人的私人身份	reveal identity
be outed	被公開身份	identity exposed

For your original sentence

> ...a few tickets and receipts from family outings we had shared over the years.

Here:

family outings = 多年來一家人一起參加的短途出遊 / 休閒外出活動

The tickets and receipts are important because they are physical traces of those shared experiences.

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

>以及一些我們多年來一起家庭出遊時留下的票根和收據。

For this context, 「家庭出遊」 is the cleanest translation.
