> phoneme = 抽象音位

BD. ALLOPHONE

82. allophone = 音位變體

A close family extension via phonetics.

Practice 159

> “Two different phones can be allophones of the same phoneme.”

「兩個不同的實際語音可以是同一音位的不同音位變體。」

Practice 160

> “Allophones do not normally distinguish word meaning.”

「音位變體通常不會改變詞義。」

This is not a morphological derivative of everyday phone, but belongs to the same Greek sound root and is useful for domain awareness.

BE. -PHONE AS A WORD ELEMENT

83. -phone = sound / sound-producing or receiving device

Important family-extension note.

The element -phone comes from the idea of sound/voice.

Examples:

* telephone

- * microphone
- * megaphone
- * saxophone
- * xylophone
- * homophone

These are not separate meanings of bare everyday phone, but the word element explains a large lexical family.

BF. HOMOPHONE

84. homophone = 同音異義詞

Practice 161

> “‘Right’ and ‘write’ are homophones.”

「right 和 write 是同音異義詞。」

Practice 162

> “Homophones sound the same but differ in meaning or spelling.”

「同音異義詞發音相同，但意思或拼法不同。」

BG. MICROPHONE

85. microphone = 咪高峰；麥克風

Practice 163

> “Speak into the microphone.”

「對著咪高峰說話。」

Practice 164

> “The microphone records sound.”

「麥克風用來收錄聲音。」

Again, not a meaning of bare phone, but a close lexical-root extension.

BH. HEADPHONE / EARPHONE

86. headphones = 耳機

Practice 165

> “She listened through headphones.”

「她戴著耳機聽。」

Practice 166

> “Noise-cancelling headphones can reduce background noise.”

「降噪耳機可以減少背景噪音。」

87. earphones = 入耳式耳機

Practice 167

> “He wore wireless earphones.”

「他戴著無線耳機。」

Practice 168

> “The earphones connect to the phone.”

「耳機連接到手機。」

BI. PHONE AS IDENTITY / DEVICE METONYMY

88. phone = contents/activity accessed through the device — 手機中的資訊 / 活動

A metonymic conversational use.

Practice 169

> “Everything is on my phone.”

「我的所有資料都在手機裡。」

Practice 170

> “I have the ticket on my phone.”

「我的票存在手機裡。」

Here phone can stand for:

> the digital contents/apps/account accessible through the device not merely the physical hardware.

BJ. “CHECK YOUR PHONE”

89. check your phone = 查看手機上的新訊息 / 通知

Practice 171

> “I kept checking my phone.”

「我不停查看手機。」

Practice 172

> “She checked her phone for messages.”

「她查看手機有沒有新訊息。」 check your phone usually means:

> inspect notifications/messages/apps not physically inspect the hardware.

This is directly relevant to your passage.

BK. “BE GLUED TO YOUR PHONE”

90. be glued to your phone = 手機不離手；一直盯著手機

A very common figurative idiom.

Practice 173

> “He was glued to his phone all evening.”

「他整晚都*手機不離手 / 一直盯著手機*。」

Practice 174

> “Try not to be glued to your phone during dinner.”

「吃飯時盡量不要*一直盯著手機*。」 be glued to one's phone = 長時間專注手機，幾乎無法把注意力移開

Very relevant to this passage's attention theme.

BL. “LIVE ON YOUR PHONE”

91. live on your phone = 幾乎所有時間都在用手機

Informal figurative expression.

Practice 175

> “Teenagers seem to live on their phones.”

「青少年好像整天都*離不開手機*。」

Practice 176

> “He practically lives on his phone.”

「他簡直*整天都在用手機*。」

Not literal residence.

BM. “CAN'T GET OFF THE PHONE”

92. can't get off the phone = 一直講電話停不下來

Practice 177

> “She couldn’t get off the phone.”

「她一直講電話講個不停。」

Practice 178

> “He was on a long business call and couldn’t get off the phone.”

「他在講一通很長的工作電話，一直無法結束通話。」

BN. “GET SOMEONE ON THE PHONE”

93. get someone on the phone = 聯絡到某人並讓其接電話

Practice 179

> “Can you get the manager on the phone?”

「你可以叫經理來接電話 / 聯絡到經理嗎？」

Practice 180

> “We finally got a technician on the phone.”

「我們終於電話聯絡到一名技術員。」

BO. “PUT SOMEONE ON THE PHONE”

94. put someone on the phone = 叫某人來接電話

Practice 181

> “Can you put Amy on the phone?”

「可以叫 Amy 來接電話嗎？」

Practice 182

> “She put her supervisor on the phone.”

「她讓主管接電話。」

BP. "HOLD THE PHONE"

95. hold the phone = 等一下；慢著

A conversational idiom.

Practice 183

> "Hold the phone — did you say 100,000 likes?"

「等等——你剛才是說十萬個讚嗎？」

Practice 184

> "Hold the phone, that changes everything."

「等一下，那就完全不同了。」

hold the phone = wait a moment / stop and reconsider

Often humorous/informal.

This is different from:

> physically hold a phone.

BQ. "GET OFF YOUR PHONE"

96. get off your phone = 別再用手機了

Practice 185

> "Get off your phone and finish your homework."

「別再玩手機了，快完成功課。」

Practice 186

> "She told him to get off his phone during dinner."

「她叫他吃飯時不要再看手機。」 get off your phone = 停止使用手機，把注意力移開

Very relevant to the source theme.

BR. PHONE-FACING / PHONE-BASED WORK

97. phone-based = 以電話進行的

Practice 187

> “The service is mainly phone-based.”

「這項服務主要透過電話進行。」

Practice 188

> “Phone-based support remains important.”

「電話式支援服務仍然很重要。」

98. phone-based authentication = 手機驗證

Practice 189

> “The system uses phone-based authentication.”

「系統使用手機驗證。」

Practice 190

> “A code is sent to the registered phone.”

「驗證碼會傳送到已登記手機。」

BS. PHONE VERIFICATION

99. phone verification = 手機號碼驗證

Practice 191

> “The account requires phone verification.”

「帳戶需要進行*手機號碼驗證*。」

Practice 192

> “Phone verification helps confirm account ownership.”

「手機驗證有助確認帳戶持有人身份。」

BT. PHONE TREE

100. phone tree = 電話聯絡鏈；電話通知樹

Practice 193

> “The school used a phone tree to contact parents.”

「學校使用*電話聯絡鏈*通知家長。」

Practice 194

> “Each person calls the next person on the list.”

「每個人會依次打給名單上的下一位。」

phone tree = 一種分層電話通知系統，每人負責聯絡其他指定人士

BU. PHONE BANK

101. phone bank = 集中電話聯絡團隊 / 電話中心

General organisational sense.

Practice 195

> “Volunteers worked at a phone bank to contact supporters.”

「義工在*集中電話聯絡中心*致電支持者。」

Practice 196

> “The organisation set up a phone bank for customer outreach.”

「該機構設立了電話聯絡團隊進行客戶接觸。」

BV. IMPORTANT DISTINCTIONS

phone vs telephone

phone

= shorter, ordinary everyday term.

telephone

= full form; often more formal, technical, or traditional.

> phone number

> = 電話號碼

> telephone service

> = 電話服務

Both can be noun/verb.

phone vs mobile phone

phone context-dependent and broad.

mobile phone

explicitly portable/mobile.

Today:

> “Where’s my phone?”

normally means:

> 我的手機在哪裡？

But historically/office contexts:

> phone

can mean landline.

mobile phone vs smartphone

mobile phone

= any portable cellular telephone.

smartphone

= mobile phone with advanced computing/app/internet capabilities.

Every smartphone is a mobile phone, but historically not every mobile phone was a smartphone.

phone vs cell phone

Mainly regional difference:

mobile phone

common BrE/international cell phone common AmE

phone

common broadly

phone vs call

phone

can be noun device or verb contact.

call usually focuses on the communication event/action.

> “I phoned her.”

> = 我打電話給她。

> “I called her.”

> = 我打電話給她。

The verbs overlap strongly.

But noun:

> phone = 裝置

> call = 通話

phone vs contact

phone someone

= specifically telephone.

contact someone

= broader:

* phone

* email

* message

* app

* letter

So:

> phone is one way to contact someone.

phone vs message

phone someone

traditionally implies voice call.

message someone

= send written/audio message.

Modern smartphones do both, but verbs remain distinct.

phone vs smartphone in your passage

The passage says simply:

> “my phone”

but because the writer:

- * posts video,
- * checks likes,
- * reads comments,
- * receives notifications,

the actual referent is clearly:

> a smartphone

English naturally uses the shorter:

> phone

when the context is obvious.

phone vs screen

You already mapped screen.

phone

= whole device.

= display surface.

> “I dropped my phone.”

> = 我掉了手機。

> “I cracked the screen.”

> = 我弄裂了螢幕。

phone vs handset

handset

= physical unit held in hand, especially landline/telecom equipment.

phone

= whole telephone device/service more broadly.

> cordless handset

> = 無線聽筒

> phone

> = 電話機 / 手機

phone vs receiver

receiver traditional:

= part of a landline held to ear/mouth.

phone

= whole device.

> pick up the receiver

> = 拿起電話聽筒

This distinction is less prominent with smartphones.

phone number vs contact number

phone number

= specifically telephone number.

contact number

= phone number supplied for contacting someone.

Often functionally identical, but contact number emphasizes purpose.

phone line vs phone number phone line

= communication service/channel.

phone number

= identifying number used to reach it.

One line can be associated with a number, but they are different concepts.

phone signal vs Wi-Fi

phone/mobile signal

= cellular network connection.

Wi-Fi

= local wireless internet network.

A phone may have:

* Wi-Fi but no mobile signal

* mobile signal but no Wi-Fi

Important technology distinction.

phone data vs mobile data

phone data

= information stored on the phone.

mobile data

= internet access through cellular network.

Excellent contextual distinction.

be on the phone vs use your phone be on the phone traditionally:

= be in a phone conversation.

use your phone

= any activity:

- * messaging
- * browsing
- * social media
- * video
- * gaming

So in your passage, the author is:

> using/checking the phone not necessarily:

> on the phone

put the phone down — two meanings

During a call:

> put the phone down

> = 掛線

Modern smartphone context:

> put your phone down

> = 把手機放下 / 停止使用

Exactly the source's:

> "put my phone aside"

means the second.

phone rings vs phone buzzes ring

= ringtone/audio alert.

buzz

= vibration/low buzzing notification.

Your passage uses:

> "Every buzz..."

so the phone may be vibrating rather than audibly ringing.

phone died

Usually means:

> battery ran out / device shut down.

It does not normally mean:

> the physical phone permanently broke.

Compare:

> “My phone died.”

> = 手機沒電了。

> “My phone broke.”

> = 手機壞了。

phone it in — crucial idiom

> “He phoned it in.”

does not normally mean:

> 他用電話提交了它。

In modern idiomatic English it usually means:

> 他敷衍了事 / 沒有投入應有努力。 **

The literal “send/report by telephone” sense still exists in suitable contexts, so this is a classic double interpretation.

phone — everyday vs linguistics

This is the strongest lexical contrast.

Everyday:

> “My phone is ringing.”

= 我的電話響了。

Linguistics:

> “A phone is a speech sound.”

= phone 是一個具體語音。

Same spelling, completely unrelated everyday meaning.

Excellent MCQ material.

phone vs phoneme

In linguistics:

phone

= actual sound produced

phoneme

= abstract contrastive sound category in a particular language

A learner should not translate both simply as:

> 「音」

Better:

* phone = 語音 / 實際音

* phoneme = 音位

phone vs allophone

phone

= any actual speech sound.

allophone

= one of several actual pronunciations belonging to the same phoneme.

So:

> allophones are phones, but not every distinction between phones is phonemic.

-phone as suffix vs phone device

In:

* microphone

- * saxophone
- * xylophone
- * homophone

phone relates historically to:

> sound / voice

It is not the modern noun:

> mobile phone

So avoid treating:

> saxophone

as “a type of telephone”.

check your phone in your passage

> “I kept checking the latest numbers...”

and:

> “my phone became impossible to ignore.”

The modern phrase check your phone means:

> look at the device for messages, notifications, updates, social-media metrics, etc.

> physically inspect whether the phone is damaged.

Context shifts the verb’s practical interpretation.

phone as an attention object

Modern English often uses phone metonymically for the whole stream of:

- * notifications
- * messages

- * social media
- * apps
- * news
- * digital identity

So:

> “My phone was distracting me.”

usually means:

> the digital activity arriving through the phone was distracting me not that the physical device itself was doing something independently.

This is directly relevant to your passage.

Family-extension sweep

For your original passage

You have several occurrences:

> “I posted a 45-second video and put my phone aside...”

> “the notifications on my phone were exploding...”

> “my phone became impossible to ignore.”

The exact meaning throughout is:

phone = 作者的智能手機；它既是發布影片的裝置，也是接收 likes、comments、views 和 notifications 的入口，因此後來進一步象徵整個社交媒體注意力循環。 **

Natural translations:

> 「我發布了一段 45 秒的影片，然後把手機放到一旁。」 **

> 「手機上的通知數量迅速暴增。」 **

> 「我的手機變得根本無法忽視。」 **

The last sentence is especially interesting because phone becomes slightly metonymic:

> 不是手機這件硬件本身要求作者注意，而是透過手機不停湧入的通知、數字和社交媒體反應在爭奪注意力。 **

The highest-value contrasts are:

> mobile phone → 手機

> landline phone → 固網電話

> phone someone → 打電話給某人

> phone call → 一通電話

> on the phone → 正在講電話

- > phone number → 電話號碼
- > phone signal → 手機訊號
- > phone in sick → 致電請病假
- > phone it in → 敷衍了事
- > put the phone down → 掛電話 / 放下手機
- > check your phone → 查看手機通知 / 訊息
- > be glued to your phone → 手機不離手
- > phone — linguistics → 具體語音
- > phone vs phoneme → 實際語音 vs 抽象音位
