In some contexts, requirements means simply:

things a person needs

rather than formal rules.

This is a major translation trap because 要求 may sound as though the person is making demands.

Often 需求 is more natural.

OG. REQUIREMENTS — RESOURCE NEEDS

Likewise:

staffing requirements 人手需求

storage requirements 儲存需求 energy requirements 能源需求

Here requirements describes the quantity/type needed, not rules imposed by authority.

we are not saying the task itself literally “asks” for concentration.

It means:

This figurative personification is completely normal English.

OL. HIGHLY REQUIRING? — CAUTION

Modern English normally does not use requiring as a general adjective meaning “demanding.”

Prefer:

- demanding

not:

✗ a very requiring job

except in rare/special usage.

OM. REQUIREMENT — “CALLING FOR” QUALITY

Some abstract nouns commonly follow require:

RN. REQUIRE — PASSAGE SEMANTIC CORE

The passage's structure is:

task → requires → capacities

not:

authority → requires → students to obey.

So the closest Traditional Chinese is:

需要／要求具備

rather than the strongly authoritative:

命令／規定.

RP. SEMANTIC MAP

The central concept of REQUIRE is:

X cannot proceed properly unless Y is present or done.

From this one idea, several major branches develop.

A. Natural/inherent necessity

Passage

the task required careful reading → 任務需要仔細閱讀

Also:

success requires effort → 成功需要努力

the repair requires special tools → 維修需要特殊工具

No authority has to issue an order.

B. Official obligation

the law requires helmets → 法律規定必須佩戴頭盔

students are required to submit the work → 學生必須提交作業

Necessity now comes from a rule or authority.

C. Qualification conditions

job requirements
→ 職位要求

admission requirements → 入學要求

minimum requirement → 最低要求

D. Human/system needs

dietary requirements

→ 飲食需求

staffing requirements

→ 人手需求

system requirements

→ 系統需求

Here 需求 is usually better Chinese than 要求.

E. Engineering/software

functional requirement

→ 功能需求

non-functional requirement

→ 非功能需求

requirements engineering

→ 需求工程

requirements.txt

→ 套件依賴清單

F. Legal/regulatory statutory requirement

→ 法定要求

disclosure requirement

→ 披露要求

reporting requirement

→ 申報要求

G. Finance

capital requirement

→ 資本要求／需求

margin requirement

→ 保證金要求

required rate of return

→ 必要報酬率

H. Related necessity words requisite

→ 必要的／必要條件

prerequisite

→ 先決條件 corequisite

→ 並修要求

The semantic core remains:

REQUIRE = mark something as necessary rather than merely desirable.

RS. PASSAGE RECAP

“At first glance, the task looked like a harmless skit; on closer inspection, it required careful reading, emotional awareness and serious judgment.”

Here:

require

= to make something necessary in order for an activity to be done properly

Best Traditional Chinese:

- 需要
- 要求具備
- contextually: 需要仔細閱讀、情感覺察和認真判斷

Natural contextual translation:

乍看之下，這項任務似乎只是一齣無傷大雅的短劇；但仔細分析，就會發現它其實需要仔細閱讀、情感覺察和認真的判斷。

Passage MCQ-ready meaning

require

= to need something because it is necessary for a task, situation, process, or result

需要；要求具備

The biggest learner split is between necessity arising naturally from the situation:

The task requires careful judgment.

→ 這項任務需要仔細判斷。 and obligation imposed by rules or authority:

Students are required to submit a reflection.

→ 學生必須提交反思文章。

The core grammar branches are:

require something

→ 需要某物 require someone to do something

→ 要求某人做某事 be required to do something

→ 必須做某事 require that something be done

→ 規定某事必須完成 require something of someone

→ 對某人有某項要求

The report requires revision.

→ 報告需要修訂

The house requires painting.

→ 房子需要粉刷

The noun requirement then splits importantly between:

admission requirements

→ 入學要求

and:

dietary requirements

→ 飲食需求

and:

system requirements

→ 系統需求

So requirements must not always be translated as 要求. Sometimes 需求 is much more natural.

Education and employment give:

course requirements

→ 課程要求 graduation requirements

→ 畢業要求

job requirements

→ 職位要求

Legal and regulatory English gives:

legal requirement

→ 法律要求

statutory requirement

→ 法定要求

reporting requirement

→ 申報要求

disclosure requirement

→ 披露要求

Software and engineering create another major modern branch:

functional requirement

→ 功能需求

non-functional requirement

→ 非功能需求

requirements engineering

→ 需求工程

minimum system requirements

→ 最低系統需求 and Python commonly uses:

requirements.txt

→ 套件依賴清單檔案

Finance adds:

capital requirements

→ 資本要求 margin requirement

→ 保證金要求

required rate of return

→ 必要報酬率

The closely related words are also essential:

requisite skills

→ 必要技能

a prerequisite for success

→ 成功的先決條件

prerequisite course

→ 先修課

corequisite

→ 並修要求

One especially important contrast for this passage is:

requirement

= what must be done or present versus:

assessment criterion

= the standard by which quality is judged.

For example:

Requirement: every group must perform a scene.

*要求:*每組都必須演出一個場景。

Assessment criterion: the characters' motives are communicated clearly.

*評核準則:*角色動機表達清楚。

The strongest semantic shortcut is:

REQUIRE = mark something as necessary, not merely useful or desirable.

In the passage, that distinction matters. The drama exercise does not merely encourage careful reading, emotional awareness, and judgment; to perform the scenario thoughtfully, students actually need to use those abilities. That is part of the writer's argument that drama is genuine academic learning rather than a break from it.
