

Absolutely — rise is a very strong polysemy target because your passage uses it here:

> “...small businesses always face challenges such as rising rent and strong competition...”

Here rising means increasing in amount or level, specifically rent becoming more expensive over time. But rise also commonly means move upward physically, get up, increase, become more powerful or important, begin, swell, and appear above the horizon.

Word family: rise / rose / risen / rising

Base word: rise

Verb forms: rise, rises, rose, risen, rising

Noun: rise

Part of speech: verb (動詞) / noun (名詞)

Important irregular forms:

> rise → rose → risen

Meaning in your passage: rising = increasing in amount/level — 上升中的；不斷增加的

Your phrase:

> “...challenges such as rising rent...”

Here rising means:

> becoming higher or more expensive over time.

繁體中文：

數量、水平或價格逐步提高；上升中的、持續增加的

Natural translation:

> “rising rent”

「不斷上升的租金」

So here:

> rise = 數值 / 價格向上增加

Practice 34

> “The change gave rise to several problems.”

「這項改變引起了幾個問題。」

give rise to = 造成 / 引發某種結果、情況或問題

This is a fixed expression, so I'd keep it as a high-value note rather than treat it as a separate bare-rise meaning.

18. rise above = 超越；克服

Another high-value figurative construction.

Practice 35

> “She managed to rise above the criticism.”

「她成功超越 / 不受那些批評影響。」

「獨立麵包店正變得*愈來愈普遍 / 興起*。」

on the rise = 數量、水平、重要性或普及程度正在增加

Important distinction: rise vs raise

This is the biggest learner contrast.

rise

normally intransitive:

something goes up by itself.

> “Prices rise.”

「價格上升。」

raise

transitive:

someone/something causes another thing to go up.

> “The landlord raised the rent.”

「業主提高租金。」

So:

> rent rises

> landlord raises rent

Very important.

Important distinction: rise vs increase

increase

very broad, neutral.

rise

especially natural for:

- * prices
- * temperatures
- * levels
- * numbers
- * status

> “Rent rose by 10%.”

> “Rent increased by 10%.”

Both are natural.

Rise gives a stronger upward-movement image.

Important distinction: rise vs grow

grow

often means increase gradually in size/amount or develop.

rise

emphasizes movement to a higher level.

> demand grows

> = 需求增長

> prices rise

> = 價格上升

There is overlap, but collocations differ.

Important distinction: rise vs climb

climb

can mean literal upward movement or a strong/steady increase.

rise

is more neutral/general.

> prices climbed sharply

> = 價格急升

> prices rose steadily

> = 價格穩步上升

Important distinction: rise vs soar

neutral increase.

soar

very rapid/large increase.

> rent rises

> = 租金上升

> rent soars

> = 租金急升 / 飆升

Important distinction: rise vs go up

go up

rise

more neutral/formal and common in writing/business.

> “Rent has gone up.”

> “Rent has risen.”

Both:

「租金上升了。」

Important distinction: rise vs arise

They look similar but are different.

rise

= go upward / increase

> prices rise

> = 價格上升

arise

= happen/emerge, especially a problem/situation

> problems arise

> = 問題出現

Not interchangeable.

Important distinction: rise vs stand up

rise

more formal:
get up from sitting/lying.

stand up

everyday:
move into standing position.

> “She rose from her chair.”

= 她起身。

> “She stood up.”

= 她站起來。

Important distinction: rise — increase vs rise — baking

Price:

> “Rent is rising.”

= 租金上升。

Dough:

> “The dough is rising.”

= 麵糰正在發酵膨脹。

Same verb, completely different domain.

Excellent MCQ contrast for this bakery passage.

Important distinction: rise — verb vs rise — noun

Verb:

= 價格上升。

Noun:

> “There was a rise in prices.”

= 價格出現上升。

Common pattern:

> a rise in + noun

Important distinction: rise vs rose

rise

base/present

rose

past tense

「去年租金上升了。」

But rose is also the noun for the flower, which you already mapped separately.

So this is a very useful homograph-family contrast:

> rose = rise 的過去式

> rose = 玫瑰

Pronunciation is the same /rəʊz/ in standard British pronunciation.

Important distinction: risen vs rose

rose

simple past:

risen

past participle:

> "Prices have risen."

Not:

> Prices have rose. ❌

Family-extension sweep

After the full audit, the useful modern family includes:

* rise — physical upward movement = 上升 / 升起

* rise — get up = 起身 / 站起

* rise — price/level = 上升 / 增加

* rise — noun increase = 升幅 / 上升

* pay rise = 加薪

* rise — status/success = 崛起 / 地位上升

* rise to + rank/position = 晉升至.....

* rise — rebellion = 起義 / 起來反抗

* sun/moon rise = 升起

* dough rise = 發酵膨脹

* water level rise = 水位上升

* voice/music rise = 聲音升高

* emotion/tension rise = 情緒 / 緊張感升高

* land/building rise = 聳立 / 隆起

* rise — noun slope = 上坡 / 高地

* the rise of X =的興起

* give rise to = 引起 / 導致

* rise above = 超越 / 克服

* on the rise = 正在上升 / 愈來愈普遍

* rose = rise 的過去式

* risen = rise 的過去分詞
