Practice 2

> The company is shopping around for financing.

公司正四處比較融資方案。

MCQ-ready definition:

shop for/around for X = figuratively, search among several options before choosing one

Important distinction 1: shop vs store

A major BrE/AmE distinction.

shop

especially common in BrE for a retail business.

store

especially common in AmE for a retail business, often larger.

> bookshop — very natural BrE

> bookstore — very natural AmE

Both are widely understood.

Important distinction 2: shop vs shopping

shop

noun = 店鋪

verb = 購物

shopping

noun/gerund = 購物活動；買來的東西

> go to a shop

> 去一間店

> go shopping

> 去購物

Important distinction 3: go shopping vs do the shopping

go shopping

often recreational or general buying activity.

do the shopping

usually buying necessary everyday items.

> go shopping for clothes

> 去行街買衫

> do the weekly shopping

> 買一星期的日用品 / 買餸

Important distinction 4: shop for vs buy

shop for search, compare, and consider.

buy

complete the purchase.

> I shopped for a new phone all afternoon.

我整個下午都在比較手機。

This does not necessarily mean I bought one.

Important distinction 5: shop around vs look around

shop around

specifically compare sellers/products/prices before choosing.

look around

much broader: browse or inspect.

> shop around for insurance

比較保險方案

> look around the museum

四處參觀博物館

Important distinction 6: window-shop vs shop

window-shop

look without necessarily buying.

shop

usually implies searching for goods with possible buying intent.

Important distinction 7: shopping bag vs handbag

shopping bag

used to carry purchases.

handbag

personal bag for everyday belongings.

A handbag may be a product carried inside a shopping bag.

Important distinction 8: shopping bag vs carrier bag

Especially BrE:

carrier bag

bag provided by a shop to carry purchases.

shopping bag

broader; can be reusable or brought from home.

Important distinction 9: shop floor has two meanings

Retail

> staff on the shop floor

> 店面銷售區員工

Manufacturing

> workers on the shop floor

> 工場 / 生產現場工人

Context decides.

Important distinction 10: shop = store vs shop = workshop

Retail

- > gift shop
- > 禮品店

Work/repair

- > machine shop
- > 機械工場

The second sense emphasizes making or repairing rather than retail selling.

Important distinction 11: one-stop shop is often figurative

A website can be called a one-stop shop even though it is not a physical shop.

The meaning is:

all needed services/resources in one place

Important distinction 12: talk shop does not mean talk about stores

It means:

談自己的工作 / 專業

- > Doctors talking about patients during dinner might be “talking shop.”

Important distinction 13: set up shop can be temporary

It does not always mean opening a legal retail business.

- > Reporters set up shop outside the courthouse.

= 記者在法院外*設立臨時據點*。

Important distinction 14: shop someone is BrE informal

This meaning is unrelated to purchasing:

> shop someone to the police

> = 向警方告發某人

It should not be used casually without context because learners will otherwise interpret shop as 購物.

Important distinction 15: shopping bag in your passage is partly metaphorical

A literal shopping bag holds products.

But your sentence:

> a good gift should not just fill a shopping bag; it should leave a mark on someone's heart sets up a metaphorical contrast:

shopping bag → material purchase

heart → emotional significance

So the shopping bag represents simply buying “stuff,” while the album represents meaning and memory.

Family-extension note

Shop has several strong modern branches:

1. retail place

* shop

* gift shop

* shop window

* shop assistant

2. activity of buying

* shop

* go shopping

* shop for

3. comparison before buying

- * shop around
- * shop around for

4. purchases themselves

- * the shopping

5. retail compounds

- * shopping bag
- * shopping list
- * shopping centre

6. workplace / repair

- * repair shop
- * machine shop
- * shop floor

7. figurative business/work idioms

- * one-stop shop
- * talk shop
- * set up shop
- * shut up shop

8. informal reporting sense

- * shop someone

For your passage, the relevant branch is:

shopping = the activity of buying material goods

Master comparison

Form / expression	Traditional Chinese	Core idea
-----	-----	-----
shop (noun)	商店 ; 店鋪	retail place
X shop	X 店 / 專門店	specialized retailer
shop (verb)	購物	buy/look for goods
shop for X	選購 X	search to buy

go shopping	去購物 / 行街	shopping activity
do the shopping	買日用品 / 買餸	regular household buying
shopping	購物	activity
the shopping	買回來的東西	purchases
shopping bag	購物袋	carry purchases
shopping list	購物清單	items to buy
shopping centre/mall	購物中心 / 商場	many shops
shop online	網上購物	online retail
shop around	貨比三家	compare before buying

For your original sentence

> ...because a good gift should not just fill a shopping bag; it should leave a mark on someone's heart.

Here:

shopping bag = 用來裝購買回來商品的購物袋

But in the sentence it also represents something broader:

simply buying material things

The contrast is:

> fill a shopping bag → 買了一袋實體商品

> leave a mark on someone's heart → 真正帶來情感上的影響

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 因為一份好禮物不應只是裝滿一個購物袋，而應該在別人心裏留下痕跡。

So for this passage, shop/shopping is straightforwardly the 購物 / 購買商品 branch, with the whole phrase carrying an additional material-versus-emotional contrast.
