Important distinction 1: slip vs fall

slip

describes the loss of grip/balance.

fall

describes actually going down to the ground.

> I slipped but didn't fall.

我滑了一下，但沒有跌倒。

So they are not synonyms.

Important distinction 2: slip vs slide

slip usually accidental and brief.

slide

may be controlled or uncontrolled and emphasizes continuous smooth movement.

> My foot slipped.

我的腳滑了一下。

> The box slid across the floor.

箱子在地板上滑過。

Important distinction 3: slip away vs run away

slip away

quiet, unnoticed departure.

run away

leave quickly, often to escape.

> He slipped away from the party.

他悄悄離開派對。

> He ran away from the police.

他逃離警方。

Important distinction 4: slip through the cracks vs forget forget

a person fails to remember.

slip through the cracks

something fails to receive attention, preservation, or action.

In your passage, the memories themselves metaphorically slip through the cracks.

Important distinction 5: slip through the cracks vs fall through the cracks

Both occur.

slip through the cracks

very natural and emphasizes unnoticed escape.

fall through the cracks

also common, especially for people/problems missed by systems.

Both can mean:

被制度、注意力或記憶遺漏

Important distinction 6: slip through the cracks vs slip through the net

through the cracks missed because of gaps in attention/system.

through the net

escapes checking, detection, or capture.

> a student slips through the cracks

學生被制度忽略

> a criminal slips through the net

罪犯逃過追捕

There is overlap.

Important distinction 7: slip away = leave vs disappear

Person

> She slipped away quietly.

她悄悄離開。

Time/opportunity

> The opportunity slipped away.

機會悄悄溜走。

Same metaphor, different subject.

Important distinction 8: slip into = physical vs figurative

Physical

> slip into the room

悄悄走進房間

Figurative

> slip into bad habits

不知不覺養成壞習慣

The second emphasizes gradual, almost unnoticed change.

Important distinction 9: slip someone's mind vs forget deliberately

Slip someone's mind always suggests:

unintentional forgetting

> Sorry, it slipped my mind.

= 對不起，我一時忘記了。

It cannot mean deliberately choosing not to remember.

Important distinction 10: let slip vs tell tell deliberately communicate.

let slip

reveal accidentally or carelessly.

> She told me the secret.

她把秘密告訴我。

> She let the secret slip.

她不小心把秘密說漏嘴。

Important distinction 11: slip vs mistake

mistake

general error.

slip

usually small and accidental.

> a minor slip

小失誤

> a serious mistake

嚴重錯誤

Important distinction 12: slip-up vs slip

Both can mean a small error.

slip-up

more clearly colloquial and explicitly means mistake.

slip

broader because it also has many physical senses.

Important distinction 13: slip of the tongue vs slip your mind

slip of the tongue

you say the wrong thing.

slip your mind

you forget something.

Completely different constructions.

Important distinction 14: a slip of paper vs receipt

A slip of paper describes physical size/form.

A receipt describes function.

A receipt can physically be a small slip of paper, but the words are not synonymous.

Important distinction 15: slippery literal vs figurative

Literal

> slippery floor

濕滑地板

Figurative

> slippery politician / slippery concept

難捉摸的人 / 概念

The figurative idea comes from something that is hard to “get hold of.”

Family-extension note

Slip is a very rich family built around one core idea:

something moves out of control, out of position, or out of notice

From there it develops into:

1. physical loss of footing

* slip on ice

2. physical sliding

* phone slips from hand

3. quiet movement

* slip away

* slip into a room

4. unnoticed disappearance * time slips away

* memories slip through the cracks

5. gradual decline

- * standards slip
- * prices slip

6. unintentional mental error

- * slip your mind
- * let something slip
- * slip-up

7. small document

- * slip of paper
- * pay slip

8. clothing

- * slip
- * slipper

9. adjective extension

- * slippery floor
- * slippery character
- * slippery slope

For your passage, the key idea is:

something valuable escaping unnoticed through a gap

For your original sentence

Here:

slipped through the cracks = 因沒有被特別留意或保存，而慢慢被遺漏、被忘記

A natural Traditional Chinese rendering is:

> 一頁一頁翻下去，裏面記錄的都是一些如果不特別留住，就很容易被忽略、被遺忘的小片段。

The metaphor is vivid:

memory as something small that can fall through tiny gaps

So slip here preserves its core feeling of something quietly escaping before anyone notices.
