instability

Part of speech: adjective (形容詞) / noun (名詞) / verb (動詞) / adverb (副詞)

Your passage contains:

> “She is a bit like an old tree: she does not move much, but she gives other people shade, stability, and comfort.”

Here, stability means:

emotional steadiness, reliability, and a sense that someone provides security and consistency.

繁體中文： 穩定感；可靠而令人安心的力量；情緒 / 關係上的安定

Meaning in this passage

In:

> she gives other people stability

your grandmother does not literally stop things from falling over.

Instead, her presence gives others:

* emotional security;

* consistency;

* calm;

* reliability;

* a sense that someone steady is always there.

The tree metaphor supports this meaning:

> an old tree is rooted and steady and your grandmother similarly feels:

> dependable and emotionally grounding.

Meaning: A state of emotional or relational steadiness in which people feel secure, supported, and able to rely on someone.

繁體中文： 一種令人感到安心、可靠、持久而不容易動搖的穩定感

41. stable = group of people/products managed together (旗下群體) — 旗下人才 / 作品群

A figurative extension of the horse-stable noun.

Practice 82

> “The agency has a stable of talented actors.”

「這間經理人公司旗下有一批有才華的演員。」

Practice 83

> “The publisher has built a strong stable of writers.”

「出版社建立了一支很強的旗下作家陣容。」

a stable of X = 由同一公司 / 經理 / 機構管理的一批人才、產品或資產

Common especially in:

- * entertainment;
- * publishing;
- * sport;
- * business.

Important distinction: stability vs steadiness

These overlap, but not perfectly.

stability

= resistance to sudden change, collapse, or loss of control.

steadiness

= consistent, calm, even behaviour/movement.

In your passage:

> stability

is stronger because it suggests:

> reliability + security + emotional grounding.

Important distinction: stable vs steady

stable

= not likely to change suddenly or become unsafe.

steady

= regular, even, controlled, not fluctuating.

Compare:

> stable job

> = 工作有保障

> steady income

> = 收入持續規律

They overlap strongly but emphasize different qualities.

Important distinction: stable vs secure

stable

= not changing/declining suddenly.

secure

= protected from danger/loss.

A job can be:

> stable

because the situation does not change much,

and:

> secure

because you are unlikely to lose it.

Important distinction: stable vs reliable

stable

= maintains a consistent condition.

reliable

= can be depended upon to work/behave as expected.

Your grandmother can be:

> a stable presence

and:

> a reliable person.

The first emphasizes steadiness; the second emphasizes dependability.

Important distinction: stability vs safety

stability

= resistance to change, collapse, or disorder.

safety

= absence/reduction of danger or harm.

A structure can be stable but still unsafe for another reason.

Important distinction: stable vs balanced

stable

= not easily displaced from a steady state.

balanced

= weight/forces/elements are appropriately distributed.

A balanced object is often stable, but the concepts are not identical.

Important distinction: stable vs fixed

stable

= remains relatively consistent.

fixed

= set and not changing at all.

A stable price may move slightly.

A fixed price is deliberately held at one amount.

Important distinction: stable vs constant constant

= does not change.

stable

= may fluctuate slightly but remains within a controlled/reliable range.

So:

> stable $\neq$ perfectly constant.

Important distinction: stable condition vs healthy

This is crucial in medical contexts.

stable

= not currently worsening significantly.

healthy

= in good health.

A seriously ill patient can be:

> stable

without being:

> healthy.

Important distinction: stability vs consistency

consistency

= similarity/reliability across repeated occasions.

stability

= absence of major fluctuation or destabilization over time.

Performance can be:

> consistent

because similar every time,

and:

> stable

because it does not fluctuate sharply.

Important distinction: emotional stability vs calmness

calmness

= quiet emotional state at a given moment.

emotional stability

= broader long-term ability to maintain balanced emotions.

Someone may be calm now but not emotionally stable overall.

Important distinction: stability vs permanence

stability

= resistance to change.

permanence

= lasting indefinitely.

Something can be stable for several years without being permanent.

Important distinction: stabilize vs fix

stabilize

= stop something becoming more unstable/worse.

fix

= repair or fully solve the underlying problem.

Doctors may:

> stabilize a patient

before actually treating the main cause.

So stabilization is not always full resolution.

Important distinction: stabilize vs maintain

stabilize

= move from unstable → stable.

maintain

= keep an already-existing condition.

> stabilize prices

= first reduce volatility.

> maintain stable prices

= keep them stable afterwards.

Important distinction: stabilization vs recovery

stabilization

= situation stops deteriorating/fluctuating.

recovery

= situation improves toward previous/better condition.

A patient can stabilize without yet recovering.

Important distinction: stable vs stagnant

These can be confused in economics/business.

stable

= steady and controlled.

stagnant

= showing little/no growth or development, often negatively.

A stable economy is not necessarily stagnant.

Important distinction: stable vs static

stable

= able to remain controlled despite possible change.

static

= not moving/changing.

A stable system may still be dynamic.

Important distinction: stable — adjective vs stable — horse building

Compare:

> “The situation is stable.”

= 情況穩定。 versus:

> “The horse is in the stable.”

= 馬在馬廄裡。

Same spelling and pronunciation, completely different lexical meanings.

Important distinction: stable of actors vs stable actors

a stable of actors

= a group of actors managed by one organization.

stable actors

= actors who are emotionally/financially/etc. stable.

Grammar completely changes the meaning.

Family-extension sweep

The practical stable / stability family is very rich across emotional, physical, financial, social, medical, scientific, and technical contexts:

- * stability — emotional/relational = 安定感 / 穩定
- * emotional stability = 情緒穩定
- * relationship/family stability = 關係 / 家庭安定
- * stable — general = 穩定的
- * stable person/presence = 沉穩可靠的人 / 存在

- * price stability = 價格穩定
- * political/social stability = 政治 / 社會穩定
- * stable performance = 表現穩定
- * stable condition = 病情穩定
- * chemical stability = 化學穩定性
- * system/software stability = 系統 / 軟件穩定性
- * stable connection/signal = 穩定連線 / 訊號
- * stabilize — general = 令.....穩定
- * stabilize prices/market = 穩定價格 / 市場
- * stabilize a patient = 穩定病情
- * stabilize an object = 穩住 / 固定
- * stabilization = 穩定化
- * unstable = 不穩定的
- * instability = 不穩定 / 動盪
- * stable — horse building = 馬廄

* stable of horses/actors/writers = 同一機構旗下的一批馬匹 / 人才

The main semantic branches are:

> emotional or relational steadiness

> physical balance/structural firmness > economic, social, or financial steadiness > medical non-deterioration

> scientific/technical resistance to change or failure and the unrelated homograph:

> stable = horse building / managed group

For your original passage

> “She is a bit like an old tree: she does not move much, but she gives other people shade, stability, and comfort.”

The exact meaning is:

stability = emotional steadiness, reliability, and security

Therefore:

> she gives other people stability

= 「她讓別人感到安定、安心和有依靠」

The tree metaphor is especially important.

An old tree is:

- > rooted
- > steady
- > dependable
- > not easily moved.

Your grandmother is similar emotionally:

- > she remains calm
- > she listens
- > she does not judge too quickly
- > she gives thoughtful advice
- > she has remained kind despite hardship.

So stability here is not merely:

> “things do not change.”

It means:

> her steady presence makes other people feel emotionally secure.

The most important learner contrasts are:

- > emotional stability
- > = 情緒穩定

> a stable person

> = 沉穩可靠的人

> a stable family environment

> = 安定的家庭環境

> structural stability

> = 結構穩定性 > financial stability

> = 財務穩定

> a stable job

> = 穩定工作 > political stability

> = 政治穩定 > stable condition

> = 病情穩定

> chemical stability

> = 化學穩定性 > system stability

> = 系統穩定性

> stabilize the situation

> = 令局勢穩定下來

> stabilize a patient

> = 穩定病情

> unstable

> = 不穩定的

> instability

> = 不穩定 / 動盪

> a stable

> = 馬廄

So stability is much richer than simply:

> stability = 穩定

and in your original passage it specifically means:

“the emotional security and reliability created by a calm, dependable person whose steady presence helps others feel grounded.”
