

Here's the full curation for stance, anchored to "My stance is clear: drama ... is one of the most effective ways to learn." The passage uses the major figurative sense position/opinion on an issue, while the other strong branch is the literal way a person stands, especially in sport. I'm keeping this one conservative because most specialized uses still belong to those two underlying concepts. The full MCQ-ready master list is included.

Meaning map

STANCE has two major modern branches.

A. Physical position

The original concrete concept is:

the way a person stands

General

upright stance

→ 直立姿勢

Sport

batting stance

→ 擊球站姿

Combat

fighting stance

→ 格鬥架勢

Vehicle extension

car stance

→ 車身姿態

B. Figurative position

The physical idea of where/how you stand becomes:

where you stand on an issue

Passage

my stance is clear

→ 我的立場很清楚

Policy

stance on an issue

→ 對某問題的立場

Strength

firm stance

→ 堅定立場

Change

soften one's stance

→ 軟化立場

Academic

critical stance

→ 批判性立場 / 取向

The metaphor is almost identical to Chinese:

站的位置 → 所持的立場

Passage recap

> “My stance is clear: drama, when carefully planned, is one of the most effective ways to learn.”

Here:

stance = a definite opinion or position held on an issue

Best Traditional Chinese:

* 立場

* 態度

* contextually: 我對這件事的立場

Natural contextual translation:

我的立場很明確：戲劇活動只要經過仔細規劃，就是最有效的學習方式之一。

Passage MCQ-ready meaning stance

= a position, opinion, or attitude that someone adopts toward an issue

立場；態度

The biggest learner split is:

> stance on education

> → 對教育的立場

but:

> boxing stance

> → 拳擊架勢

> golf stance

> → 高爾夫站姿

> wide stance

> → 寬站姿

The figurative meaning is easy to remember through the physical metaphor:

> physical stance

> → 你*站在哪個位置 / 怎樣站*

becomes:

> intellectual stance

> → 你在一個問題上*站哪一邊 / 持甚麼立場*

So the passage uses the opinion / argumentative-position branch: the writer explicitly tells readers where they stand in the debate over drama as a learning method.
