

Absolutely — stun is a very useful family because your passage uses stunned in the emotional-surprise sense:

> “For a few stunned seconds, I simply stared at the screen...”

Here stunned means so shocked and surprised that the writer was temporarily unable to think, speak, or react normally.

Word family: stun / stunned / stunning / stunningly

Base verb: stun

Past / past participle: stunned

Adjective: stunned

Adjective: stunning

Adverb: stunningly

Part of speech: verb (動詞) / adjective (形容詞)

Major domains:

- * shock / surprise
- * temporary inability to react
- * physical injury or incapacitation
- * animal slaughter / veterinary contexts
- * weapons / self-defence terminology
- * beauty / attractiveness
- * impressive performance/results
- * major defeat or unexpected outcome
- * fixed expressions such as stunned silence

Meaning in your passage: stunned = extremely shocked and temporarily unable to react — 震驚得愣住的；目瞪口呆的

Your sentence:

> “For a few stunned seconds, I simply stared at the screen...”

Here stunned means:

> so surprised by the unexpectedly huge number of likes that the writer momentarily could not react normally and simply stared at the screen.

繁體中文：

因極度震驚或意外而一時反應不過來、愣住、說不出話來的

Natural translation:

> 「有那麼幾秒，我震驚得愣住了，只是呆呆地望著螢幕。」

So here:

> stunned = 驚訝程度強烈到令人大腦短暫「停住」，一時不知道怎樣反應

stun someone into X = 震驚程度強烈到導致某種結果 / 狀態

AC. STUN VS SHOCK

36. stun vs shock

shock

= cause strong surprise/distress.

stun

= shock so strongly that reaction is temporarily disrupted.

Compare:

> “The news shocked me.”

> = 消息令我震驚。

> “The news stunned me.”

> = 消息令我震驚得一時說不出話 / 反應不過來。

Stun usually implies stronger temporary paralysis of reaction.

AD. STUNNED VS SHOCKED

37. stunned vs shocked

shocked

= very surprised/upset.

stunned

= so shocked that one feels mentally frozen/dazed.

So:

> shocked = 震驚

> stunned = 震驚得愣住

Your passage deliberately benefits from the stronger stunned.

AE. STUNNED VS SURPRISED

38. stunned vs surprised surprised

= something is unexpected.

stunned

= extremely surprised to the point of temporary inability to react.

Scale roughly:

> surprised → shocked → stunned

This is only a rough intensity guide, not a strict dictionary hierarchy.

AF. STUNNED VS AMAZED

39. stunned vs amazed

amazed

= extremely surprised, often positively.

stunned

= extremely shocked/surprised, with emphasis on being momentarily unable to react.

> “I was amazed by the view.”

> = 我對景色感到驚嘆。

> “I was stunned by the news.”

> = 我被消息震驚得愣住。

AG. STUNNED VS ASTONISHED

40. stunned vs astonished

astonished

= extremely surprised.

stunned

= extremely surprised + momentary mental/physical freezing.

> astonished

> = 非常驚訝

> stunned

> = 驚訝得呆住

AH. STUNNED VS SPEECHLESS

41. stunned vs speechless

stunned

= internal state of shock.

speechless

= unable/unwilling to speak because of emotion.

A person can be:

> stunned and speechless

but speechless describes the result, not necessarily the cause.

AI. STUNNED VS DAZED

42. stunned vs dazed

dazed

= confused/disoriented, often after injury or shock.

stunned

= temporarily overwhelmed by shock or physical impact.

Physical contexts overlap heavily.

> “He looked dazed after the collision.”

= 他被撞後神志有點恍惚。

> “He was stunned by the impact.”

= 撞擊令他一時失去正常反應。

AJ. STUNNED VS NUMB

43. stunned vs numb

stunned

= immediate overwhelming shock.

numb

= emotional feeling becomes dulled/absent, often after severe shock.

Possible sequence:

> stunned at first → emotionally numb later

So they are not synonyms.

AK. STUN VS STARTLE

44. stun vs startle

startle

= cause a sudden brief surprise/reflex.

stun

= cause much stronger shock.

> sudden noise startled me

> = 突然聲音嚇了我一跳 > result stunned me

> = 結果令我震驚得愣住

AL. STUN VS OVERWHELM

45. stun vs overwhelm

stun

= shock into temporary inability to react.

overwhelm

= affect someone so strongly that they struggle to cope.

Someone may be:

> stunned for a few seconds

but:

> overwhelmed for hours/days.

AM. STUNNING VS BEAUTIFUL

46. stunning vs beautiful

beautiful

= aesthetically attractive.

stunning

= so attractive/impressive that it has a striking impact.

> beautiful view

> = 美麗景色

> stunning view

> = 美得令人驚嘆的景色

Stunning is stronger and more expressive.

AN. STUNNING VS ATTRACTIVE

47. stunning vs attractive attractive

= appealing/good-looking.

stunning

= exceptionally attractive; striking.

> attractive person

> = 吸引人的人

> stunning person

> = 驚艷、非常漂亮 / 英俊的人

AO. STUNNING VS IMPRESSIVE

48. stunning vs impressive

impressive

= causes admiration.

stunning

= produces an unusually strong impact of admiration/surprise.

> impressive performance

> = 令人印象深刻的表現 > stunning performance

> = 驚艷到令人震撼的表現

AP. STUNNING VS SHOCKING

49. stunning vs shocking

shocking

usually:

= disturbing, offensive, or very surprising.

stunning

can be:

* extremely beautiful

* extremely impressive

* extremely surprising

So:

> stunning dress

> = 非常漂亮

but:

> shocking dress

> could mean

> = 令人震驚 / 不得體

Not interchangeable.

AQ. STUNNING — POSITIVE VS NEGATIVE

This adjective is highly context-sensitive.

Positive:

> “a stunning performance”

= 驚艷表現

Neutral/shock:

> “a stunning revelation”

= 驚人揭露

Negative:

> “a stunning defeat”

= 令人震驚的敗仗

So stunning itself does not guarantee positive meaning.

Core concept:

> having an extremely strong impact

AR. STUNNING VS FLATTERING

You already curated flatter.

stunning

= the person/object itself looks extremely attractive.

flattering

= something makes the wearer/person look better.

> stunning dress

> = 裙本身非常漂亮 > flattering dress

> = 裙穿在你身上很襯你

A dress can be:

* stunning but not flattering on you

* flattering but not visually spectacular itself

Excellent MCQ distinction.

AS. STUNNING VS THRILLING

You already curated thrill.

stunning

= produces shock/admiration.

thrilling

= produces excitement.

> stunning view

> = 美得震撼 > thrilling ride

> = 刺激的遊樂設施

Different emotional effects.

AT. STUNNING VS FLAT

No semantic relationship despite superficial spelling resemblance.

> stunning

> comes from stun

not:

> stun + -ning connected with flat/flatten.

Worth noting only because learners sometimes visually overanalyse derivatives.

AU. STUNNED VS STUNNING — CLASSIC -ED/-ING CONTRAST

50. stunned = person affected by shock

> “I was stunned.”

= 我震驚得愣住。

51. stunning = thing causing intense effect OR exceptionally attractive/impressive

> “The result was stunning.”

= 結果令人震驚 / 驚人。

> “The view was stunning.”

= 景色美得驚人。

So:

> stunned = 感受者的狀態

> stunning = 造成強烈效果的事物 / 極度驚艷的

AV. STUNNINGLY VS STUNNEDLY

stunningly is normal:

> stunningly beautiful

= 美得驚人 stunnedly

is extremely rare/nonstandard for ordinary learner use.

Natural English prefers:

> “He stared in stunned silence.”

not:

> “He stared stunnedly.”

So for practical vocabulary:

> keep stunningly

> do not promote stunnedly

AW. PRONUNCIATION / FORM NOTE

stun /stʌn/

stunned /stʌnd/

stunning /'stʌnɪŋ/

Spelling:

> stun → stunning

The final consonant doubles before -ing:

> stun → stunning

not:

> stuning

And:

> stun → stunned

AX. WORD-FAMILY SEMANTIC MAP

The family develops around one broad idea:

> hit someone/something with such force—physical or emotional—that normal reaction is temporarily disrupted

From that we get:

physical

> blow stuns a person

emotional > surprising news stuns a person strong positive effect

> performance stuns an audience

adjective extension

> stunning performance / stunning scenery

= so impressive that it metaphorically “stuns” you.

This semantic bridge explains why:

> “stunning scenery”

and > “stunning news”

can use the same adjective.

AY. FAMILY-EXTENSION SWEEP
