

Absolutely — thrill is a very useful polysemy/family word because your passage uses it in an emotional sense:

> “Yet the thrill did not last in its pure form for very long.”

Here thrill means a sudden strong feeling of excitement and pleasure. But the family also extends into exciting experiences, physical shivers, emotional reactions, entertainment, danger/adrenaline, and the verb thrill.

Word family: thrill / thrilled / thrilling / thrillingly

Base word: thrill

Part of speech: noun (名詞) / verb (動詞)

Adjective: thrilled

Adjective: thrilling

Adverb: thrillingly

Major domains: emotion, entertainment, sport, danger/adrenaline, physical sensation, figurative reaction

Meaning in your passage: thrill = strong excitement and pleasure — 興奮感；刺激感；雀躍

Your sentence:

AB. THRILL VS RUSH

40. thrill vs rush

Very useful.

thrill

= exciting emotional experience.

rush

= sudden surge of adrenaline/excitement.

> "I felt a rush of adrenaline."

= 我感到一股腎上腺素刺激。

> “I felt a thrill.”

= 我感到一陣興奮刺激。

Rush often emphasizes the bodily surge more strongly.

AC. THRILL VS BUZZ

You already curated buzz.

thrill

= sharp burst of strong excitement.

buzz

= lingering lively excitement, stimulation, or energetic feeling.

> thrill of winning

> = 勝利瞬間的刺激 > buzz after winning

> = 勝利後持續的興奮感

They overlap but are not identical.

AD. THRILL VS ADRENALINE

41. thrill vs adrenaline

adrenaline

= hormone and bodily arousal response.

thrill

= subjective emotional experience.

Someone may experience adrenaline physiologically and describe the feeling as a thrill.

AE. THRILL VS SUSPENSE

42. thrill vs suspense

thrill

= excitement.

suspense

= tension caused by uncertainty about what will happen.

A thriller often creates suspense, which then produces thrills.

AF. THRILL VS TENSION

43. thrill vs tension

tension

= nervous pressure/anticipation.

thrill

= excitement, often enjoyable.

A sports final may contain:

- * tension before the result

- * thrill when the decisive moment occurs

AG. THRILL VS FEAR

44. thrill vs fear

They are not opposites.

Thrill can contain fear when:

- * danger is controlled
- * risk feels exciting
- * outcome is uncertain

Example:

> roller coaster

= fear + enjoyment + excitement

So:

> a thrill of fear is perfectly natural.

AH. THRILL VS FUN

45. thrill vs fun

fun

= enjoyable experience broadly.

thrill

= intense excitement.

A relaxing board game can be fun without being thrilling.

AI. THRILL VS ENTERTAINMENT

46. thrill vs entertainment

happy

= general positive emotional state.

thrilled

= extremely pleased and excited.

> “I’m happy you came.”

> = 我很高興你來了。

> “I’m thrilled you came.”

> = 我非常高興 / 興奮你來了。

Thrilled is significantly stronger.

AK. THRILLED VS EXCITED

48. thrilled vs excited

excited

= emotionally energized/enthusiastic.

thrilled

= extremely pleased + excited.

> excited about the trip

> = 對旅行很興奮 > thrilled about the result

> = 對結果感到非常高興興奮

AL. THRILLED VS THRILLING

A classic MCQ distinction.

Person:

> "I was thrilled."

= 我很興奮。

Thing:

> "The experience was thrilling."

= 這經歷很刺激。

So:

> ed = 感受者

> ing = 造成感受的事物

AM. "NOT THRILLED"

「經理對延誤*相當不滿*。」

Practice 71

> "She was less than thrilled about the criticism."

「她對那些批評*很不高興*。」

AO. "THRILL TO..."

51. thrill to + experience/sound = 因.....而激動 / 興奮

More literary/older but still valid.

Practice 72

> "The audience thrilled to the sound of the orchestra."

「觀眾聽到管弦樂聲時感到*激動興奮*。」

Practice 73

> "Fans thrilled to the final goal."

「球迷因最後一個入球而興奮不已。」

Lower priority, literary/journalistic.

AP. "THRILL AT..."

52. thrill at + thing = 因.....感到興奮

Practice 74

> "She thrilled at the thought of travelling alone."

「想到獨自旅行，她感到興奮。」

Practice 75

> "He thrilled at the opportunity."

「他對這個機會感到非常興奮。」

Less common than:

> be thrilled by/with/about but valid.

AQ. THRILLINGLY

53. thrillingly = 令人興奮地；刺激地

Relatively uncommon.

Practice 76

> "The match ended thrillingly."

「比賽以極其刺激的方式結束。」

Practice 77

> "The story is thrillingly unpredictable."

「故事的發展刺激得令人難以預測。」

Useful but lower-frequency.

AR. THRILLER / THRILLING — GENRE DISTINCTION

54. thriller = genre noun

> “It is a thriller.”

= 它是一部驚悚 / 懸疑作品。

55. thrilling = quality adjective

> “It is thrilling.”

= 它很刺激。

A comedy can be thrilling without being a thriller.

A thriller can theoretically be badly made and not very thrilling.

Excellent distinction.

AS. “PSYCHOLOGICAL THRILLER”

56. psychological thriller = 心理驚悚作品

Practice 78

> “The film is a psychological thriller.”

「這部電影是一部心理驚悚片。」

- * dramatic action

AW. “THRILL OF THE CHASE”

60. the thrill of the chase = 追逐過程本身的刺激感

A common figurative expression.

Practice 86

> “For him, it was all about the thrill of the chase.”

「對他來說，重要的只是追逐過程本身的刺激感。」

Practice 87

> “She enjoyed the thrill of the chase more than the final prize.”

「她享受追逐的刺激，甚至多於最後的獎賞。」

Very relevant conceptually to:

> chasing likes / approval / success.

AX. “THRILL IS GONE”

61. the thrill is gone = 新鮮感 / 刺激感消失了

A common idiomatic idea.

Practice 88

> “After a few months, the thrill was gone.”

「幾個月後，那種刺激感 / 新鮮感已經消失。」

Practice 89

> “Once the numbers became routine, the thrill disappeared.”

「當那些數字變得習以為常後，興奮感便消失了。」

Directly related to your passage.

AY. “THRILL WEARS OFF”

62. the thrill wears off = 興奮感逐漸消退

Very useful.

Practice 90

> “The thrill soon wore off.”

「那種興奮感很快就消退了。」

Practice 91

> “The thrill of online attention can wear off quickly.”

「網絡關注帶來的刺激感可能很快消退。」

This is almost exactly the passage’s idea.

AZ. IMPORTANT DISTINCTIONS thrill vs excitement

excitement

= general state of being excited.

thrill

= sharper, stronger, often sudden excitement.

> excitement can last for hours

> a thrill often comes as a burst thrill vs buzz

You already curated buzz.

thrill

= intense burst of excitement.

buzz

= lively ongoing excitement/energy.

Your passage:

> viral success initially gave a thrill while constant notifications may create:

> a buzz

rush

= sudden physiological surge of excitement/adrenaline.

thrill

= emotional experience produced by that excitement.

> adrenaline rush

> thrill of winning

thrill vs pleasure

pleasure can be calm.

thrill

is stimulating.

> reading quietly may give pleasure

> a roller coaster gives a thrill

joy

= strong happiness.

thrill

= strong excitement.

Joy can be deep and calm; thrill is usually more energized.

thrill vs delight

delight

= great pleasure.

thrill

= excitement plus pleasure.

thrill vs suspense

suspense

= tension from uncertainty.

thrill

= resulting excitement.

A thriller often uses suspense to create thrills.

thrill vs shock

shock

= sudden disturbing surprise; can be negative.

thrill

= sudden excitement, usually pleasurable.

Both may produce strong bodily reactions, but emotional valence differs.

thrill vs fear

Thrill may contain fear when danger is controlled.

Examples:

- * roller coaster
- * horror film
- * extreme sport

So:

> fear and thrill can coexist.

thrill vs attraction

attraction

= feeling drawn to someone/something.

thrill

= sudden excitement that attraction may produce.

excited

= enthusiastic/aroused.

thrilled

= very pleased and excited.

Thrilled is usually stronger.

thrilled vs delighted

thrilled

= very excited + pleased.

delighted

= very pleased, not necessarily highly stimulated.

Compare:

> "I'm delighted you came."

> = 我很高興你來。

> "I'm thrilled to perform tonight."

> = 我今晚能演出，感到非常興奮。 thrilled vs relieved

thrilled

= extremely pleased/excited.

relieved

= anxiety/worry has ended.

You can be both:

> thrilled and relieved.

thrilling vs exciting

exciting

= causes excitement broadly.

thrilling

= especially intense, dramatic, stimulating excitement.

So:

> thrilling is often stronger.

thrilling vs suspenseful

thrilling

= exciting.

suspenseful

= creates tense uncertainty.

A scene can be suspenseful before becoming thrilling.

thrilling vs dangerous

A thrilling activity may be dangerous, but thrilling describes:

> emotional effect

not objective danger.

A safe roller coaster can still be thrilling.

thrill vs thrill-seeking

thrill

= feeling.

thrill-seeking

= behavioural tendency to pursue strong stimulation.

Important psychology distinction.

thrill vs addiction

The passage says social media can become addictive, but:

thrill

= emotional reward.

addiction

= compulsive pattern involving loss of control and continued use despite harm.

A thrill can reinforce behaviour, but it is not itself addiction.

cheap thrill vs meaningful enjoyment

cheap thrill

= quick, shallow, short-lived stimulation.

meaningful enjoyment

= deeper satisfaction with longer personal value.

This distinction fits your passage's contrast between:

> chasing numbers and:

> creating something honest.

thrill of success vs satisfaction

This is particularly important for your source.

thrill

= immediate emotional high.

satisfaction

= deeper sense of contentment after accomplishing something.

The passage says:

> success gave the writer a thrill

but did not create lasting:

> satisfaction

That is why:

> "The more attention I received, the more I wanted."

thrill vs fulfilment

thrill

= short-lived excitement.

fulfilment

= deeper sense that an activity is meaningful and worthwhile.

Again, central to the passage:

> viral numbers → thrill > honest creativity → deeper fulfilment noun thrill vs verb thrill

Noun:

> “It was a thrill.”

= 那是一種刺激 / 興奮。

Verb:

> “It thrilled me.”

= 那令我十分興奮。

Same semantic core, different grammar.

thrilled vs thrilling — classic grammar trap

Person receives feeling:

> “I am thrilled.”

Thing causes feeling:

> “The experience is thrilling.”

So:

> thrilled = 感到興奮的 > thrilling = 令人興奮的

not thrilled — pragmatic meaning

> “I’m not thrilled about it.”

Usually does not merely mean:

> 我沒有非常興奮。

It often means:

> 我其實不太高興 / 不太滿意。 **

This understatement is highly useful conversational English.

thrill in your passage

Your passage says:

> “Yet the thrill did not last in its pure form for very long.”

The exact meaning is:

thrill = 影片突然爆紅、likes 不斷增加、陌生人留言、被大量人注意所帶來的最初那股強烈而愉快的興奮感。 **

But the writer says it did not remain “pure” because that excitement soon became mixed with:

* compulsive checking

* dependence

* anxiety

* pressure

* criticism

* vulnerability

So the semantic contrast is:

> initial thrill → later pressure
