

Word family: trip / trips / tripped / tripping

Base word: trip

Plural: trips

Past tense: tripped

Past participle: tripped

 -ing form: tripping

Part of speech: noun (名詞) / verb (動詞)

Your sentence:

> “However, in the middle of the trip, a large sea turtle appeared...”

Meaning in this passage

Here, trip means a journey or visit to another place, usually for a particular purpose and often involving returning afterward.

繁體中文： 為旅行、度假、工作、參觀等目的前往另一個地方的一段行程 / 旅程

中文翻譯：

> “...in the middle of the trip...”

「.....在這次旅程 / 行程進行到一半左右時.....」

Here:

the trip = 這次在沖繩進行的旅行 / 活動行程

1. trip = journey/visit (旅程) — 旅行 ; 行程 ; 旅程

This is the meaning used in your passage.

Meaning: A journey to another place, often for a particular purpose and usually of limited duration.

Practice 1 — Original

> “In the middle of the trip, a sea turtle appeared.”

「在這次旅程 / 行程進行到中段時，一隻海龜出現了。」

Practice 2

> “We took a weekend trip to the island.”

「我們去那個島作了一次週末旅行。」

Practice 3

> “How was your trip to Japan?”

「你的日本之旅怎麼樣？」

trip = 為某個目的前往另一地的一段旅行或行程

Common:

* business trip

* school trip

* day trip

* weekend trip

* family trip

These belong to one central journey sense.

2. trip = short journey / excursion (短途行程) — 短途旅行；外出

Trip often suggests a relatively short or specific journey.

Practice 4

> “We made a quick trip to the supermarket.”

「我們很快去了一趟超級市場。」

Practice 5

> “The class went on a day trip to the museum.”

「全班去博物館作了一次一日遊學 / 短途旅行。」 trip = 為辦事、參觀或休閒而進行的一次較短或明確的外出行程

For strict counting, I would merge this with Meaning 1.

The difference is mainly scale, not core meaning. The Manual says not to split senses merely because duration or setting changes.

3. trip = stumble because your foot catches something (動詞) — 絆倒；絆了一下

As a verb, trip means to catch your foot on something and lose your balance.

Practice 6

> “She tripped over a stone.”

「她被石頭絆了一下 / 絆倒了。」

Practice 7

> “Be careful not to trip on the cable.”

「小心不要被電線絆倒。」 trip = 腳被某物阻住或勾到，令身體失去平衡

This is a genuinely distinct core meaning.

4. trip someone = cause someone to stumble (使絆倒) — 絆倒某人

The verb can also be transitive.

Practice 8

> “The loose wire tripped him.”

「鬆脫的電線把他絆倒了。」

Practice 9

> “He was accidentally tripped during the game.”

「他在比賽中意外被人絆倒。」 trip someone = 令某人的腳被阻住而失去平衡

For core counting, this belongs under Meaning 3.

5. trip = activate a switch/alarm/safety mechanism (機械 / 電力) — 觸發 ; 跳掣

Trip can mean causing a switch, alarm, circuit breaker, or safety mechanism to activate.

Practice 10

> “The fault tripped the circuit breaker.”

「故障令斷路器跳掣。」

Practice 11

> “Opening the door tripped the alarm.”

「打開門時觸發了警報器。」

trip something = 觸發某個開關、警報或安全機制，使其啟動 / 斷開

This is a distinct technical sense.

6. trip = experience caused by a hallucinogenic drug (名詞，非正式) — 迷幻體驗

In informal drug-related English, a trip can mean the mental/perceptual experience caused by a hallucinogenic drug.

Practice 12

> “The word trip can refer to a hallucinogenic drug experience.”

「trip 也可以指服用迷幻藥後的迷幻體驗。」

Practice 13

> “This sense is informal and highly context-dependent.”

「這個意思屬於非正式用法，而且高度依賴語境。」 trip = 服用迷幻藥後出現的知覺、思想或感官體驗；非正式

This is a real modern sense, but lower priority for a general learner database.

7. trip = exciting/strange experience (俚語 / 比喻) — 奇妙經歷；怪異體驗

By extension, trip can informally mean an unusual, intense, or mind-bending experience.

Practice 14

> “That exhibition was quite a trip.”

「那個展覽真是一場很奇妙 / 離奇的體驗。」

Practice 15

> “The whole experience was a real trip.”

「整個經歷真的很奇異 / 刺激。」

This is slangy and derived from Meaning 6.

For core counting, I would keep it as a lower-priority extension rather than a separate major sense.

Important distinction: trip vs journey

trip

usually refers to the whole occasion of travelling somewhere and often back again.

journey

focuses more on the movement from one place to another.

> “The trip to Okinawa lasted five days.”

= 整次旅行五天。

> “The journey from the airport took two hours.”

= 從機場到目的地的路程兩小時。

So:

trip = 整次行程 / 旅行

journey = 移動路程本身

Important distinction: trip vs tour

You already mapped tour.

trip

= broad journey/visit to another place tour

= often an organized journey involving sightseeing, several stops, or a planned activity

In your passage:

> the Okinawa holiday = trip

> the organized snorkeling activity = tour

That is a very useful contrast.

Important distinction: trip vs travel

travel

usually refers to the general activity of moving between places and is often uncountable.

trip

is one specific journey.

> “I enjoy travel.”

= 我喜歡旅行這件事。

> “I enjoyed the trip.”

= 我喜歡這次旅程。

Important distinction: trip vs holiday

holiday focuses on time away from work/school for rest or leisure.

trip

focuses on the journey/visit itself.

You can have:

> a business trip

which is not a holiday.

Your passage contains both concepts:

> on holiday in Okinawa

> during the trip

Important distinction: trip vs fall

trip

= lose balance because your foot catches something fall

= actually move downward to the ground

You can:

> trip but not fall

if you recover your balance.

So:

trip = 絆到 / 失去平衡

fall = 跌倒

Important distinction: trip vs slip

trip

= foot catches on an obstacle slip

= foot loses grip on a smooth/slippery surface

> trip over a cable

> slip on ice

Different cause.

Countability note

The noun trip is countable:

> a trip

> two trips

> several trips

This differs from travel, which is usually uncountable when referring to travelling generally.

Phrasal-verb note

Trip appears in phrasal or multiword constructions such as:

* trip over

* trip up

Under your operating procedures, phrasal verbs are normally excluded unless the target sentence requires them.

Because your sentence uses the noun trip, these do not need to be promoted into the main entry.

Family-extension note

The practical modern family includes:

* trip
 * trips
 * tripped
 * tripping

Useful constructions include:

* business trip
 * day trip
 * school trip
 * take a trip
 * trip over something
 * trip a circuit breaker

The morphological family is small, so most learning value comes from the contrast between the journey, stumble, and trigger mechanism senses.

Master comparison

Form / sense	MCQ-ready Traditional Chinese meaning
-----	-----
trip — journey	為旅行、工作、參觀等目的前往另一地的一段具體行程 / 旅程
trip — short excursion	一次較短、目的明確的外出或短途行程；屬於 journey 義
trip — stumble	腳被某物阻住或勾到而失去平衡；絆倒 / 絆一下
trip someone	令某人的腳被阻住而失去平衡；與 stumble 義相關
trip — trigger mechanism	觸發開關、警報、斷路器等機制
trip — drug experience	迷幻藥引起的知覺或心理體驗；非正式、低優先度
trip — strange experience	奇異、強烈或令人感官震撼的體驗；俚語延伸

For your original sentence

> “However, in the middle of the trip, a large sea turtle appeared...”

The exact meaning is:

trip = 這一次從日常所在地前往沖繩旅行、遊玩的整體行程

So:

> in the middle of the trip

= 在這次旅行 / 行程進行到中段時

For your database, I would count 3 genuinely useful core meanings for trip:

1. noun — a journey or visit to another place
2. verb — stumble because the foot catches something
3. verb — trigger a switch, alarm, or safety mechanism

I would keep drug trip as a lower-priority informal sense, merge short/day/business trips under #1, and merge transitive trip someone under #2 rather than inflate the core count.