

Absolutely — visibility is a strong Tier 1 polysemy/family target because your passage uses it here:

> “online popularity brings not only visibility, but also vulnerability.”

Here visibility means the degree to which a person becomes seen, noticed, or publicly known. But the word also has major meanings involving physical ability to see, weather conditions, public exposure, business/marketing prominence, search/display discoverability, and organisational transparency.

Word family: visible / visibility / visibly / invisible / invisibility

Base adjective: visible

Noun: visibility

Adverb: visibly

Opposite adjective: invisible

Opposite noun: invisibility

Meaning in your passage: visibility = public exposure / being noticed — 曝光度；能見度；知名度

Your sentence:

> “online popularity brings not only visibility, but also vulnerability.”

Here visibility means:

> the degree to which the writer becomes publicly seen, noticed, recognised, and exposed to other people online.

繁體中文：

一個人在公眾或網絡上被看見、注意和認識的程度；曝光度 / 公眾能見度

Natural translation:

> “online popularity brings not only visibility, but also vulnerability”

「網絡人氣帶來的不只是曝光度，還有脆弱性。」

So here:

> visibility = 在公眾面前被更多人看見、注意和認識的程度

「單車人士晚上應穿著*高能見度 / 反光衣物*。」

Practice 30

> “The workers wore high-visibility jackets.”

「工人穿著反光外套。」

high-visibility = 特別設計成容易被看見、通常使用鮮色或反光材料的

Important distinction: visibility vs sight

sight

= ability to see / something seen.

visibility

= how easily/far things can be seen under particular conditions.

> poor eyesight

> = 視力差

> poor visibility in fog

> = 大霧中能見度低

Not interchangeable.

Important distinction: visibility vs vision

vision

can mean:

* eyesight

* future idea/strategy

visibility

= degree of being visible or noticed.

> blurred vision

> = 視力模糊

> low visibility

> = 能見度低

Important distinction: visibility vs exposure

exposure

= state/process of being presented to attention or influence.

visibility

= degree to which people can actually see/notice you.

In media:

> increased exposure

> = 獲得更多曝光機會

> increased visibility

> = 實際變得更容易被注意 / 認識

They overlap strongly, but exposure often emphasizes the opportunity/process; visibility emphasizes how noticeable you are.

Important distinction: visibility vs popularity

visibility

= how many people can see/notice you.

popularity

= how much people like/support you.

A person can have:

> high visibility but low popularity

= 很多人知道他，但未必喜歡他。

This is extremely relevant to your passage.

Important distinction: visibility vs fame

fame

= widespread recognition.

visibility

= degree of exposure/noticing.

Visibility may lead to fame, but it does not necessarily mean lasting fame.

Your viral video gave the writer:

> visibility

without necessarily creating:

> lasting fame

Important distinction: visibility vs recognition

visibility

= being seen/noticed.

recognition

= being acknowledged, identified, or appreciated.

> visibility gets you noticed > recognition means people know/acknowledge who or what you are

They are related but not identical.

Important distinction: visible vs obvious

visible

literally or figuratively:

= able to be seen/noticed.

obvious

= easy to understand/recognise as true.

> visible damage

> = 肉眼可見的損壞

> obvious mistake

> = 明顯的錯誤

Not every obvious thing is visually visible.

Important distinction: visible vs noticeable

visible

= capable of being seen.

noticeable

= sufficiently distinct to attract attention.

Something can technically be visible but barely noticeable.

Important distinction: visibility — physical vs public

Physical:

> “Fog reduced visibility.”

= 大霧降低能見度。

Public:

> “Social media increased her visibility.”

= 社交媒體提高了她的曝光度。

Same word, completely different domain.

Excellent MCQ contrast.

Important distinction: visibility — public vs digital/search

Public visibility:

> how noticeable someone is to society/media.

Search visibility:

> how easily content appears where users can find it.

> celebrity visibility

> = 公眾曝光度

> website search visibility

> = 網站搜尋能見度

Important distinction: visibility into X

This corporate/technical construction does not mean physically seeing inside something.

> “We need better visibility into costs.”

means:

> 我們需要更清楚掌握成本情況。

So:

> visibility into = 掌握 / 監察的透明程度

Very useful business-English sense.

Important distinction: visible vs invisible — social sense

visible

= recognised/noticed publicly.

invisible

= overlooked/unacknowledged.

> “The campaign made the issue more visible.”

= 活動令議題得到更多關注。

> “The group had previously felt invisible.”

= 那個群體以前一直覺得自己被忽視。

Strong figurative contrast.

Important distinction: visibility and vulnerability in your passage

The writer deliberately pairs:

> visibility

> = more people can see and notice you with:

> vulnerability

> = more exposure to criticism, judgement, and emotional harm

So visibility is not automatically positive.

It means:

> being more publicly exposed

which can bring both:

* recognition

* criticism

That contrast is central to the passage.

Family-extension sweep

After the full audit, the useful modern inventory includes:

* visibility — physical = 能見度
 * visibility — object = 可見度 / 醒目程度
 * visibility — public = 曝光度 / 公眾能見度
 * visibility — media/profile = 知名度 / 受注意程度 * visibility — business = 品牌 / 市場曝光度
 * visibility — digital = 搜尋 / 平台可見度
 * visibility into = 對流程 / 數據的可視性 / 掌握程度 * visible — physical = 看得見的
 * visible — noticeable = 明顯可察覺的
 * visible — public = 高曝光 / 受注目的
 * visibly = 明顯地 / 看得出地
 * invisible — physical = 看不見的
 * invisible — social = 被忽視 / 沒有存在感的
 * invisibility = 不可見 / 被忽視狀態
 * high visibility = 高能見度 / 高曝光度
 * high-visibility clothing = 高能見度 / 反光衣物
