Passage recap

> “She spotted Kelvin and waved shyly. He waved back...”

Here:

wave = to move one’s hand in the air as a greeting or signal

Best Traditional Chinese:

* 揮手

* contextually: 害羞地揮手打招呼

And:

wave back

= 揮手回應

Natural contextual translation:

她看到 Kelvin 後，害羞地向他揮了揮手；Kelvin 也揮手回應。

Passage MCQ-ready meaning

wave

= to move one’s hand from side to side as a greeting, goodbye, or signal

揮手；招手

The biggest learner splits are:

> wave at someone

> → 向某人揮手

> wave a flag

> → 揮舞旗幟

> ocean wave

> → 海浪

> wave of complaints

> → 一波投訴

> wave of sadness

> → 一陣悲傷

> sound wave

> → 聲波

> wavy hair

> → 波浪捲髮

And the signal verbs are especially useful:

> wave someone over

> → 招手叫某人過來

> wave someone through

> → 揮手示意通過

> wave something away

> → 揮手表示不用 / 不理會

So the passage uses the straightforward social greeting gesture branch, reinforced immediately by wave back, which means Kelvin returns the little girl's gesture.
