Important distinction: attract vs appeal

They overlap strongly.

attract

Emphasizes drawing someone’s attention, interest, presence, or desire toward something.

> “The ad attracted my attention.”

「廣告吸引了我的注意力。」

appeal to

Emphasizes that something matches someone’s tastes, interests, needs, or values.

> “The simple design appeals to me.”

「這個簡潔設計很合我心意／對我很有吸引力。」

So:

attract → 把人吸引過來

appeal → 某種特質令某人喜歡

Important distinction: attractive vs beautiful

beautiful

primarily evaluates beauty.

> “a beautiful building”

「一座美麗的建築」

attractive

is broader.

Something may be attractive because it is:

* beautiful

* useful

* affordable

* convenient

* profitable

* comfortable

For example:

> “an attractive job offer”

does not mean the job offer looks beautiful.

It means:

條件令人想接受。

Important distinction: attractive vs appealing

These often overlap.

attractive

can describe:

- * physical appearance
- * products
- * prices
- * jobs
- * people
- * ideas

appealing

emphasizes something producing a pleasant emotional response or desire.

> “The idea sounds appealing.”

「這個構思聽起來很吸引。」

For products, either may work:

> “an attractive product”

> “an appealing product”

Important distinction: attractive vs desirable

attractive

= has qualities that draw interest or liking

desirable

= worth having, choosing, or achieving

A job can be desirable because of salary and career prospects even if we would not naturally discuss its “appearance.”

Important distinction: attraction vs attractiveness

attraction

can mean:

1. the force/feeling of being drawn toward something;
2. an appealing feature;
3. a tourist attraction.

attractiveness

means specifically:

the quality or degree of being attractive

Compare:

> “The location is one of the apartment’s main attractions.”

「地點是這個單位其中一個主要吸引之處。」

> “The location increases the apartment’s attractiveness.”

「地點提升了這個單位整體的吸引力。」

Important distinction: attraction vs tourist attraction

> “I feel an attraction to the place.”

= 「我對這地方有一種吸引感。」

But:

> “The castle is a tourist attraction.”

= 「城堡是一個旅遊景點。」

Same noun, very different sense.

Important grammar note: attracted vs attractive

This is crucial.

describes the person/thing causing attraction

> “The product is attractive.”

「產品很有吸引力。」

attracted

describes the person experiencing attraction

> “I am attracted to the product.”

「我被這個產品吸引。」

Compare:

> “She is attractive.”

> = 她很有吸引力。

> “He is attracted to her.”

> = 他被她吸引。

Exactly like:

* interesting → 令人感興趣的

* interested → 感到有興趣的

Family-extension note

Following our Golden Manual, useful extensions include:

* attract attention = 吸引注意

* attract customers = 吸引顧客

* attract investment = 吸引投資
 * attract criticism = 招致批評
 * be attracted to = 被.....吸引／對.....產生好感
 * tourist attraction = 旅遊景點
 * main attraction = 主要吸引之處／主要焦點
 * physical attraction = 外貌／情感上的吸引
 * attractive offer = 有吸引力的提議
 * attractive price/rate = 優惠而吸引的價格／利率
 * attractively priced = 定價具吸引力
 * unattractive = 缺乏吸引力的

One especially useful expression:

the main attraction

This can mean the feature or person that draws the most interest.

> “The view is the hotel’s main attraction.”

「景觀是這間酒店最主要的吸引之處。」
