「關上門令那一刻產生了一種奇怪的徹底結束感。」

finality = 某件事已經完全結束或確定, 不再有改變餘地的狀態／感覺

Important distinction: final vs last

They overlap strongly, but there is a useful difference.

last

mainly means:

最後一個／最末一個

> “the last person in line”

「隊伍中最後一個人」

final

often adds the idea of:

completion, conclusion, or decisiveness

> “the final decision”

「最終定案」

So final often sounds more deliberate or conclusive.

Important distinction: final vs ultimate

final

= last in sequence or conclusively decided ultimate

can mean:

* final eventual result; or

* most fundamental/greatest

> “the ultimate goal”

「最終目標／最高目標」

> “the final meeting”

「最後一次會議」

They are not always interchangeable.

Important distinction: final vs complete

final

emphasizes no further stage/version is expected

complete

emphasizes nothing is missing

> “the final report”

= 最終定稿的報告

> “a complete report”

= 內容完整、沒有缺漏的報告

A report could be complete but not yet final if further revisions are still expected.

Important distinction: finally vs eventually

finally

often suggests:

- * a wait,
- * effort,
- * frustration,
- * or the last point in a sequence.

> “The bus finally arrived.”

「巴士終於到了。」

eventually means:

at some later point in the end, without necessarily emphasizing relief.

> “He eventually became manager.”

「他後來最終成為經理。」

Important distinction: finally vs at last

Both can mean 「終於」.

finally

neutral and very common.

at last

often carries stronger emotion such as relief or impatience.

> “At last, we’re home!”

「終於到家了！」

For your heading

> “## Result and final reflection”

The exact meaning is:

final = 位於整篇內容最後部分、用來總結前面經歷和想法的

So:

> final reflection

= 最後的總結性反思／結尾反思

For an essay heading, “「結果與總結反思」” would probably sound the most natural in Traditional Chinese.

finale = final and often dramatic part of a performance/event — 終曲；壓軸；最後高潮部分

Meaning: The last part of a performance, show, piece of music, event, or series, especially when it is designed to be memorable, dramatic, or impressive.

Practice 1

“The concert ended with a spectacular finale.”

「音樂會以一個非常精彩的壓軸終曲／最後高潮結束。」

Practice 2

“The fireworks display was the finale of the evening.”

「煙花表演是當晚活動的壓軸環節／最後高潮。」

finale = 表演、活動或作品最後出現，而且通常具有高潮、壓軸或總結效果的部分

finale = final episode of a television series/season — 最終集；季終集

This is extremely common in modern entertainment English.

Practice 3

“The season finale airs next week.”

「這一季的季終集下星期播出。」

Practice 4

“Millions of viewers watched the series finale.”

「數百萬觀眾收看了這套劇的大結局／最終集。」

season finale = 一季節目的最後一集

series finale = 整套劇集的最後一集／大結局

This distinction is useful:

season finale → 某一季結束

series finale → 整個系列正式結束

Important distinction: final vs finale

These are related, but they are not interchangeable.

final

Usually means last / concluding / decisive and can be an adjective or noun.

“the final chapter”

= 最後一章

“the final decision”

= 最終決定

“the football final”

= 足球決賽

finale

Is a noun meaning the final, often climactic part of a performance, event, or entertainment work.

“the concert finale”

= 音樂會的壓軸終曲

“the season finale”

= 季終集

So:

final = 最後的／最終的／決賽

finale = 壓軸結尾／終曲／大結局

Important distinction: ending vs finale

ending

Very broad:

= anything that brings something to an end.

“I didn’t like the ending of the film.”

finale

Usually suggests a deliberately constructed final section, often dramatic or impressive.

“The musical has a spectacular finale.”

「這套音樂劇有一個非常精彩的壓軸結尾。」

Not every ending is a finale.

Important distinction: finale vs conclusion

conclusion

= the ending or final judgment/result, often formal or logical.

“the conclusion of the report”

「報告的結論」

finale

= dramatic or performative final section.

“the finale of the concert”

「音樂會的壓軸終曲」

So in your essay heading:

“Result and final reflection”

we would not use finale, because this is an academic concluding section, not a dramatic performance ending.
