unrealistic = 沒有充分考慮現實限制, 因此實際上難以做到或成立的

Important distinction: real vs true

They overlap, but they are not identical.

real

often asks whether something exists or is genuine

> “Is this diamond real?”

「這顆鑽石是真的嗎？」

true

often asks whether a statement or fact is correct

> “Is that story true?”

「那件事是真的嗎？」

So:

* real diamond = 真鑽石

* true statement = 正確／屬實的陳述

Important distinction: real vs actual

real

very broad and common:

= genuine, existing, substantial

actual

especially emphasizes the reality as opposed to what was expected, claimed, or assumed

> “The actual cost was much higher.”

「實際成本高得多。」

So actual often carries stronger contrast with an earlier assumption.

Important distinction: real vs genuine

real

= not fake / actually existing

genuine

= truly what it claims to be, and often also sincere

> “a genuine signature”

「真正由本人簽署的簽名」

> “genuine concern”

「真誠的關心」

genuine often emphasizes authenticity or sincerity.

Important distinction: really vs very

very

mainly strengthens adjectives/adverbs.

> “very effective”

「非常有效」

really

can strengthen:

* adjectives

* verbs

* whole statements

> “really effective”

> “I really like it.”

> “Did he really say that?”

So really is grammatically more flexible.

Important distinction: really vs actually

really

can mean:

* truly

* very

* genuinely

actually

often introduces the true situation, especially when correcting an assumption.

> “I thought she worked here, but she actually works next door.”

「我以為她在這裡工作，但她其實在隔壁工作。」

So actually often means:

「其實真實情況是……」

while really often adds emphasis.

Important distinction: reality vs realism*

reality

= what actually exists or happens

> “We must face reality.”

「我們必須面對現實。」

realism

= a style/philosophy/attitude that represents or accepts reality accurately

> “The novel is known for realism.”

「這本小說以寫實風格聞名。」

Important distinction: real vs realistic*

Very important.

real

= actually exists

> “a real tiger”

「一隻真的老虎」

realistic

= looks or behaves like reality

> “a realistic toy tiger”

「一隻外觀非常逼真的玩具老虎」

The toy tiger can be:

realistic but not real

= 很逼真, 但不是真的老虎

Important distinction: realistic vs pessimistic

Being realistic does not automatically mean being negative.

realistic

= judging according to actual conditions

pessimistic

= expecting bad outcomes

You can be:

realistic and optimistic

at the same time.

Important distinction: imaginary vs unreal vs unrealistic

imaginary

= exists only in imagination

> “an imaginary friend”

unreal

= not real / feels unreal

> “The experience felt unreal.”

unrealistic

= not practically achievable or not accurately representing reality

> “an unrealistic deadline”

These are related but distinctly different.

Family-extension note

Following our Golden Manual, these practical extensions are especially useful:

* real life = 現實生活

* real world = 現實世界

* real-time = 即時的／實時的

* real-world experience = 現實環境中的實際經驗

* real estate = 房地產

* reality check = 讓人面對現實的提醒／現實檢驗

* reality TV = 真人實境節目

* virtual reality (VR) = 虛擬實境

* augmented reality (AR) = 擴增實境

* realistic = 逼真的；現實可行的

* realism = 寫實主義；務實態度

* unreal = 不真實的；非正式「好得難以置信」

* unrealistic = 不切實際的

A particularly useful expression:

reality check

= an experience or fact that forces someone to recognize the real situation

> “The poor sales figures were a reality check for the company.”

「低迷的銷售數字令公司不得不認清實際情況。」
